In Memoriam

The Day You Went

*The day you went my world was done.
There came no comfort from the sun
Nor from the love of life that lurks
In sunlight, nor from all the works
Of faith and old philosophy,—
Till one young rose leaned down to me
And shot my brooding like a wing;
The most foolhardy, gallant thing
In all this rocking world, conceived
Of morning dew . . . and I believed!
It bannered upward from the sod
The visible defense of God.*

—Beatrice W. Ravenel.

After the manuscript of this book was complete and arrangement made for its publication, on April 1, 1919, at the family home in the City of Houston, Mary Ellen (Williams) Ewing, one of the authors, as the culmination of a lingering illness, peacefully and with her last expression a smile, passed into eternity, her remains being interred in the family vault, St. John's Cemetery, Thibodaux, Louisiana.

The loss in her death to humanity, to services of beneficence and philanthropy, was recognized by all familiar with the course of her life. The floral offerings, in number and beauty, were a rare tribute. The Associated Press heralded abroad her untimely departure, while the leading local dailies, The Houston Post, The Houston Chronicle and The Houston Press, recounting her life's services and achievements herein narrated, as with one voice proclaimed her praise.

The Houston Press, noting the fact of her being "widely known throughout the State and Nation," referred to the reforms she had effected in the public schools, saying, "A part of Mrs. Ewing's religion was sanitation;" it also referred to her efforts to secure women on the school board, adding, "It was due to the campaign she waged that women are on the school board today." Further of her it was said:

"The passing of Mrs. Ewing takes from Houston one of the city's most useful women, and her death will be mourned by many a person whom she befriended. She was a woman of tireless energy, and although she was a society leader, much of her time and effort were spent in helping others and in work for the public good."

The Houston Chronicle, with a double-column picture of her, and stating under heavy headlines that death had called "One of Texas' Noted Women Whose Life Was Devoted to Welfare Work for Mankind," declared that in her death, "a life of great usefulness and activity was ended," and further:

"The name of Mrs. Ewing was long associated with all affairs of the City and State which had to do with uplift work or civic welfare. She was a woman of strong personality, public spirited, and the life of social events. Her many deeds of public and philanthropic service gave her a place in 'Noted Women of Texas,' published by the Biographical Press."

This paper in an editorial thus said:

"Announcement of the death of Mrs. Presley K. Ewing brings a feeling of sorrow and sympathy from many Houston hearts. A life that was devoted to good deeds and that encompassed much for the happiness and uplift of mankind is ended.

"In Mrs. Ewing were combined those graces which make for life's finest realizations. Active at all times in the church and social life of the city, she managed to also find time for much constructive work in lightening the burdens and enlarging the opportunities of those whose lines had not fallen in pleasant places.

"Her death touches, as did her life, the heart of Houston."

The Houston Post editorially spoke as follows:

"A host of friends who had known and loved her through the many years of residence here are filled with sorrow over the death of Mrs. Presley K. Ewing at her home in this city Tuesday morning. To her family and her friends she was the embodiment of all that was good and noble in Southern womanhood and in their memories she will ever live as a shining example of the devoted wife and mother, the undisputed queen of her home and family circle, the most optimistic and generous of friends.

"The influence of Mrs. Ewing extended far beyond her personal acquaintanceship, however, for throughout the length and breadth of the State she was known as one of the most distinguished and able of the public spirits of Texas. Although possessed of gifts and graces which made her a favorite of society circles, she devoted much of her time and talent to the improvement of the public welfare. She was connected with innumerable movements and organizations for the uplift of the people of Texas economically, mentally, morally and spiritually. Her work for the women and children of the city and the State particularly has been invaluable, as she has played a distinguished part in ushering in the new era of justice and recognition for women and the welfare of the child.

"The forces of progress and righteousness have suffered a great loss in the death of Mrs. Ewing."

Let us who knew her best, her husband and her daughters, add only this:

Her exalted life, with its sweet helpfulness, will remain as a light for guidance, to inspire and bless the work of others. Though she be dead, it shall not die. For "there is something that mantles through its beauty that cannot wholly perish."

We who suffer from her loss, forgetting doubts and fears, see now through the mists of tears and surgings of sorrow the "young rose," leaning down to us, "conceived in morning dew"—

"It bannered upward from the sod,
The visible defense of God."

PREFACE

With affectionate greetings, we dedicate to our posterity these pages, a labor of love and, as we think, of just family pride.

The work was at first intended to be only a sketch of the immediate family of the authors, and in a measure that plan has been preserved, especially as concerns the details of personal history; but in other respects the design has been greatly enlarged and the work so arranged that any branch may be extended indefinitely from the point where it enters, going in like manner into the particulars of its personal history as far as desired. The arrangement of blank pages at the end has been adopted to facilitate such a course.

Neither cost nor time nor care has been spared to make the contents of this little history portray, not a romance, but the facts as they were, so that they may be relied upon as accurate and accepted as authentic. Birth, marriage and death records have been explored wherever available, both as confirmative and in quest of new light. Records still preserved have revealed to us marriages and births, which will appear herein, occurring more than a hundred years before the War of the Revolution (1776-1781). In addition, our research has extended to many histories, some now obscure and others out of sale print, and also to the archives of family branches, wherever obtainable.

This task has been performed, not because we are pursuers of phantoms, or fatuous of a useless aristocracy, or given to blind hero-worship, but because we believe that noble aspirations, lofty aims and deeds of exalted service, when found in a family, may properly be perpetuated as a legacy to the generations yet unborn, if not for emulation, at least as a source of encouragement to their efforts, of inspiration for their endeavors.

If then, what we have written shall serve, in other days to come, as a light, a landmark or a hope to some weary or faltering feet pursuing the pathway of life, so that, seeing, they may take heart again, we shall have reward enough.

Standing as we necessarily do upon the narrow Present, slipping as we speak, there can be only two real sources of happiness—our memories of the past, our hopes of the future. Whether these pages contribute to the fountain of either must be judged by others; at least, the purpose which has animated us will not be condemned, and in the thought of Lord Byron,

“What is writ, is writ.”

The Ewing Genealogy With Cognate Branches

CHAPTER I

THE ORIGIN AND EARLY HISTORY OF THE EWINGS

"Ewing" is historically stated to be the Anglified form of Ewen or Ewin, derived from Evan or Evghan, which was in Latin Eugenius, and several of the ancient "Kings of Scots" bore the name of Ewen or Eugenius, one of them having been a distinguished leader of his race in the great wars against the Romans.¹

Another of the name (Devonaldus filius Ewyn) was witness to a charter granted by Walter, Steward of Scotland, in 1177, and in the middle of the Sixteenth Century the Ewings acquired the lands, in County Dumbarton, which were an ancient possession of the Earls of Lennox, and they also possessed valuable estates in County Argyll.²

The authentic ancient Ewing coat of arms consists of arg., a chevron az., ensigned with a banner gu., charged with a canton az., thereon a saltire arg., all between two mullets in chief gu., sun in splendor in base, also gu., with crest and motto as shown in illustration.

The Ewings are of Scottish extraction, and were long settled in the West of Scotland, but the branches of the family in America, to which this record particularly relates, were of Scotch-Irish descent. The clan with which these Ewings were identified was allied with the Campbells, as opposed to the Gordons, and doubtless many a time on the field of battle its members were inspired by the romantic, thrilling song—

"The Campbells are comin', Oho, Oho;
The Campbells are comin', Oho, Oho,
The Campbells are comin' to bonnie Loch Leven,
The Campbells are comin', Oho, Oho."

¹Scottish Nation; Phelan's History of Tennessee, p. 132; Weekley's Romance of Names, p. 38.

²Burke's Landed Gentry, p. 1214.

Ewing progenitors of whom we are writing, being Presbyterians, left their seat, which was on the River Forth near Stirling Castle, in the vicinity of Loch Lomond, on account of religious persecution of the Protestants. First, they went to the Isle of Bute, in Scotland, and then settled at or near Coleraine, County Londonderry, of Ulster, to the North of Ireland. Members of the family conspicuously took part in the notable revolt of the Irish Presbyterians in that County in 1689, when the siege of Londonderry by King James II of England proved unsuccessful. That King, it will be recalled, was an ardent Romanist, intensely inimical to the Dissenters.

Whatever may have been the part taken by the Ewings in the siege just mentioned, it is beyond doubt that in the battle of the Boyne, fought on the river of that name in Eastern Ireland, July 12 (N. S.), 1690, in which King James II was opposed by William of Orange, Captain Charles Ewing took part on the side of the Irish Protestants under William of Orange, and was awarded by the latter for his valor in the battle a silver-handled sword. This sword was brought to America by a descendant of Captain Charles Ewing, but was later stolen.¹

The anniversary of this battle of the Boyne, as the result of which James II was forced to abdicate in favor of the rule of William and Mary, is still celebrated by the Orangemen or Irish Protestants.

The dissatisfaction of the Dissenters over the conditions which had prevailed in Ireland, among them the sacramental test which served to disqualify them for office, and the tenantry system with its high and burdensome rents, and the increase of tithes for clergy not of their faith and entertaining a different view of civil and religious liberty, had resulted in a desire on the part of many of them to escape the irritating situations of the Old World, and to seek their fortunes in America.²

CHAPTER II

THE DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF THE EWINGS IN AMERICA

THOMAS AND FINLEY EWING

who were brothers, emigrated from County Londonderry, Ireland, about 1718, to Southampton, Long Island, thence to New Jersey.

The illustrious career of members of this branch of the family, particularly in Ohio, is a part of familiar history.

Thomas Ewing, born 1695, died 1747; married Mary Maskell, born 1701, died 1784, who was a daughter of Captain Daniel Maskell. They lived at Greenwich, New Jersey, one of their sons being Thomas Ewing, born 1722, died 1772, whose third wife was Sarah Vickars, by whom he had a son, George Ewing, born 1754, died 1825, who was a Lieutenant in the Continental Army, and whose wife was Rachel Harris.

From this union was born Thomas Ewing (1789-1871), United States Senator from Ohio, who married Maria, a daughter of Hugh Boyle, whose wife was a daughter of Neil and Eleanor (Daugherty) Gillespie, senior, who lived opposite Brownsville, Pennsylvania, but in Washington County.

Thomas and Maria Ewing were the parents of seven children: (1) Philemon Beecher, late of Lancaster, Ohio; (2) George; (3) Ellen B., who became the wife of General William T. Sherman; (4) Hugh Boyle, late of Lancaster, Ohio; (5) Thomas, once a democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio; (6) Maria, wife of Colonel Clement F. Steele, and (7) General Charles Ewing.

Two of the sons of Thomas Ewing (1695-1747) were officers in the Militia during the Revolution, and another son, Samuel, was a County Judge. The emigrant Thomas Ewing was a deacon, and his son Thomas an elder, in the Presbyterian Church at Greenwich.

Finley Ewing, the emigrant brother, was the lineal ancestor of General Hugh Ewing, late United States Minister to The Netherlands.

These brothers, Thomas and Finley, were sons of Captain Charles Ewing, who was rewarded for his valor by William, Prince of Orange, in the battle of the Boyne, with the silver-handled sword before mentioned.

A descendant of this emigration with whom the authors are acquainted is Thomas J. Ewing, a prominent citizen of Houston, Texas, connected with large business interests.

To go at greater length into the personal history of this distinguished branch of the family would be to indulge in unnecessary repetition, as its illustrious career has already been written into enduring records.¹

son of William and Mary Ewing of the North of Ireland, married Deborah Dickson, and of this union was born a family of children in the townland of Tawley, County Leitrim, Ireland. After marrying, he, James Ewing, adopted the former spelling of his surname, dropping the g.

He emigrated from Ireland and settled in New York City about the year 1822.

There are in America numerous descendants of this branch, which included James L. Ewin, Esq., who was a registered attorney of the United States Patent Office, Washington, D. C., and a man of prominence in his profession.²

was born at or near Coleraine, County Londonderry, Ireland, about 1692, died September 6, 1748, and emigrated thence to America in 1725 with his wife, Rachel Porter, who was his cousin, and their children then born.

His father was William Ewing, born about 1665-1670, near Stirling Castle, in Scotland, whence he went to County Londonderry, Ireland, taking up his abode at or near Coleraine, which was probably in or about the year 1685, for in that year, during Passion Week, the rites of the Church of Rome were openly celebrated at Westminster with full splendor, and in the same year, the suppression of the Duke of Monmouth's rebellion in England, and that of the Earl of Argyll in Scotland, was followed by great severities, practiced by the King (James II of England and VII of Scotland), resulting in many of the Scotch Presbyterians fleeing from Scotland to the North of Ireland to escape the religious persecutions imposed upon them.³

William Ewing, who was the son of William Ewing and his wife, Eliza Milford, married twice; by the first marriage

he had one son, the emigrant Nathaniel, and by the second marriage he had four sons and a daughter: William, Joshua, James, Samuel and Anne, and possibly other children. All of these named were immigrants to this country, and some at least accompanied their half-brother Nathaniel to America, in 1725, and in the same emigration were members of the Porter and Gillespie families, and also David Breading.

Pp. 5, 8 and 9.

The text, in ascribing to Gen. Hugh Boyle Ewing lineal descent from Finley Ewing, an "emigrant brother" of the emigrant Thomas Ewing, followed the Biog. Ency. & Portrait Gallery of Ohio, Vol. 6, at p. 1491, where it is said: "The father of the emigrant, Finley Ewing, was of the Clan Colquhoun * * *". This sentence was evidently faulty in not being so framed as to make "father" instead of "emigrant" the antecedent of Finley Ewing; for a close study of the context, as well as extrinsic matter, makes it certain that Gen. Hugh Boyle Ewing was a descendant of the emigrant Thomas Ewing.

Whether the latter's father was named Finley or Charles, or bore both names, is not certain, the traditions and evidences being conflicting, but whatever his Christian name, it was the father of the emigrant Thomas Ewing, who was the gallant Captain in the Battle of the Boyne, to whom the silver-handled sword was awarded for valor, as stated in the text.

One of the grandsons, and perhaps others of the family, subsequently went to Texas, where a number of their descendants may be found, with some of whom the authors have a personal acquaintance, among them Edna Ewing, the cultured and socially attractive wife of John Bonner, of Houston, who is an esteemed citizen and high-ranking Mason.

he had one son, the emigrant Nathaniel, and by the second marriage he had four sons and a daughter: William, Joshua, James, Samuel and Anne, and possibly other children. All of these named were immigrants to this country, and some at least accompanied their half-brother Nathaniel to America, in 1725, and in the same emigration were members of the Porter and Gillespie families, and also David Breeding.

Nathaniel Ewing and his half-brother, Joshua Ewing, settled in Maryland on the east side of the Susquehanna, in Cecil County, near the Pennsylvania line. The half-brother, James Ewing, took up his abode in what became Prince Edward County, Virginia, and the other half-brothers, William for certain, and Samuel probably, settled in Pennsylvania; but we have no record of the descendants of the half-brothers Joshua, James and Samuel.

was probably born in County Londonderry, Ireland, about the year 1710, but family tradition, evidently confusing him with his father, has fixed his birth at Stirlingshire, Scotland, in the vicinity of Glasgow, near Loch Lomond, whence his father emigrated to County Londonderry, Ireland. This tradition has also accorded to him, likely again confusing him with his father, an elder brother Robert, who was a feudal baron.

This emigrant, himself Scotch, probably married in Ireland an Irish girl before coming to America, which accounts for the manifest Scotch-Irish ancestry noticeable in the descendants of this branch of the family as well as in those of the other branches.

William first settled in Pennsylvania, and later went to Virginia, where he died, his widow and children, at least some of them, removing to Georgia.

One of the grandsons, and perhaps others of the family, subsequently went to Texas, where a number of their descendants may be found, with some of whom the authors have a personal acquaintance, among them Edna Ewing, the cultured and socially attractive wife of John Bonner, of Houston, who is an esteemed citizen and high-ranking Mason.

CHARLES AND ROBERT EWING

who were brothers, were born in County Londonderry, Ireland, probably at or near Coleraine, about 1715-1725, and emigrated thence to America about the period between 1735-1747.

They were cousins of the emigrant Nathaniel Ewing, and on their arrival in America, they first went to his home, in Cecil County, Maryland, but shortly after accompanied their cousin, the emigrant James Ewing, Nathaniel's half-brother, to what became Prince Edward County, Virginia, and later they joined a new adventurous colony and settled near the Peaks of Otter, in Bedford County, Virginia, where they remained until they died.

The relationship of the different Ewing emigrants to whom we have referred, is doubtless already apparent to the thoughtful reader.

We have seen that Thomas and Finley Ewing were brothers, and that Robert and Charles Ewing were brothers, and that the latter were cousins of Nathaniel Ewing and his half-brothers and sister. While direct or positive evidence is wanting as to further kinship, the circumstances are convincing that all the Ewing emigrants we have noted were relatives, with the possible exception of James Ewin, the emigrant who settled in New York.

In the family of the authors, there has been from the earliest a tradition, that Captain Charles Ewing, the gallant soldier rewarded by William of Orange for valor in the battle of the Boyne, was of their family; he was the father of the emigrants, Thomas and Finley Ewing, and hence the tradition could be true only on the theory of these emigrants being cousins of the emigrants, Robert and Charles Ewing, or otherwise related.

When the historic causes leading to the exodus of the Ewings from their seat near Stirling Castle, in Scotland, to the North of Ireland and thence to America, are considered in the light of the fact that they came to this country, not Scotch alone, but Scotch-Irish, and that the emigration from Ireland was from the same vicinity, it seems irresistibly clear that the Ewing emigrants mentioned were all in some manner related.

In concluding this chapter, we observe that there have been men and women in each generation, from each of the branches we have considered, distinguished in practically every walk of life, exemplifying our country's best ideals and traditions, and making for the perpetuity and glory of its institutions. As illustrative of this we mention a few of the leaders in thought and action, in addition to those whose careers are elsewhere given.

Emma Pike Ewing, educator, born Broome County, New York, 1838; married W. P. Ewing, 1863; dean Chautauqua Assembly Cooking School; professor domestic economy, Iowa Agricultural College; director Model School of Household Economics, affiliated with Marietta College, Ohio; author of "The Art of Cookery," and other books.¹

Hugh Boyle Ewing, born Lancaster, Ohio, October 31, 1826, died 1905; married Henrietta Young, 1858; practiced law in St. Louis, Missouri, and later at Leavenworth, Kansas; was major to brigadier general and bvt. major general on the side of the Union in the Civil War; minister to The Hague, 1866-70; author of "A Castle in the Air," besides other writings.¹

James Stevenson Ewing, born McLean County, Illinois, July 19, 1835, a lawyer, cousin and partner of the United States Vice President (1893-1897), Adlai Ewing Stevenson, who was born in Christian County, Kentucky, son of John T. and Eliza (Ewing) Stevenson. He (James S. Ewing) was United States Minister to Belgium in 1893-1897.²

John Gillespie Ewing, lawyer, born Lancaster, Ohio, May 22, 1860, son of Philemon B. and Mary Rebecca (Gillespie) Ewing; professor mathematics and later of history and economics, Notre Dame University; State deputy of Indiana Knights of Columbus.²

James Ewing, physician, born Pittsburgh, December 25, 1866; professor pathology, Medical Department, Cornell University; author of articles on "The Signs of Death," "Sudden Death," etc.³

Nathaniel Ewing, jurist, born Uniontown, Pennsylvania, June 17, 1848; died March 28, 1914; appointed Judge Fourteenth Judicial District of Pennsylvania, and later United States District Judge, Western District of Pennsylvania.³

1862; son of General Thomas and Ellen (Cox) Ewing; a lawyer, distinguished for his achievements as a solicitor of patents.¹

Robert Ewing, born Mobile, Alabama, September 27, 1859; has had phenomenal success in newspaper enterprise; became publisher and owner of N. O. Daily States; State Tax Collector Fourth Municipal District; Louisiana member Democratic National Committee, and member of Louisiana Constitutional Convention.¹

The honors to the family from these distinguished persons, as observable from the places of their birth, are pretty equally distributed among the different emigrations to which we have adverted, and hence their achievements may be regarded a common heritage.

CHAPTER III

NATHANIEL EWING, THE EMIGRANT: HIS BIRTH, MARRIAGE, CAREER AND DESCENDANTS

as before stated, married his cousin, Rachel Porter, about 1721, at or near Coleraine, County Londonderry, Ireland, and from the marriage were born the following children:

1. Sarah, born at or near Coleraine, 1722; married Robert Potts. They lived in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, above where Harrisburg now stands, and reared there a considerable family.

2. William, born at or near Coleraine, 1723-1724; died September 10, 1788; married Kitty Ewing, daughter of the emigrant, Joshua Ewing.

3. Anne, born on the Atlantic Ocean, 1725; died 1809.

4. John, born Little Britain, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, June 21, 1732; died September 8, 1802; married Hannah Sargent. He was a distinguished clergyman of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and has been referred to as "the noted Philadelphian."

5. James, born June 21, 1732 (a twin to John); died 1818-1819; married Peggy Ewing.

6. Rachel Margaret, born Little Britain, 1735; married her cousin, William Ewing.

7. George, born at Little Britain, September 1, 1737; died April, 1785.

8. Alexander, born 1740, died June or July, 1799; married Jane Kirkpatrick.

William Ewing, the eldest son of Nathaniel the emigrant, lived in Maryland until his death, leaving two children, a daughter Rachel, who married Stephen Dancy, and a son, Nathaniel, who went to Kentucky, joined the Kentucky Militia, and was killed at Fort Meigs, under General Harrison.

Anne, daughter of the emigrant Nathaniel Ewing, married in 1745 James Breading, born 1726, who lived in Nottingham, Pennsylvania, but afterwards purchased a plantation adjoining the Maryland line and Susquehanna River, in Pennsylvania, where they reared six children: Mary, Nathaniel, Rachel, David, Sarah and Anne.

The eldest daughter, Mary Breading, married Hugh Laughlin and lived in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, having a large family.

Nathaniel Breading, the eldest son, born at Little Britain, March 17, 1751; died April 15, 1821, at Tower Hill Farm, near Merrittstown, Fayette County, Pennsylvania; married in Cecil County, Maryland, June 17, 1784, his cousin, Mary Ewing (daughter of George Ewing, son of the emigrant Nathaniel), born Nottingham, April 1, 1767; died at Allegheny, Pennsylvania, August 31, 1845; removed to Fayette County, Pennsylvania; their children, besides those dying in infancy, being George, born August 19, 1785; Mary Ann, born September 4, 1787; James Ewing, born October 19, 1789; William, born December 3, 1791; Sarah, born January 3, 1796; Harriet, born May 11, 1803; Caroline Margaret, born August 3, 1807, and Elizabeth, born August 8, 1810. The daughter, Caroline Margaret, married a Mr. Trevor, the youngest son of the marriage being Francis Nathaniel Trevor, of Lockport, New York. Another of the daughters is understood to have married George Hogg, of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, the father of John T. Hogg and Nathaniel Breading Hogg.

Nathaniel Breading, son of James and Anne (Ewing) Breading, was in the service of the Revolutionary Army, 1777-1778, at Valley Forge, in receiving and distributing goods bought and sent to the Army by his uncle, George Ewing, while his younger brother, David Breading, was Temporary Aide to General Maxwell, at Princeton, and was General Washington's guide, under General Maxwell's detail, in leading the former to the retreating army of General Lee, at whom it is said Washington swore vehemently, deprecating and countermanding the retreat which Lee had ordered.

George Ewing, son of the emigrant Nathaniel, married April 8, 1766, Mary Porter, daughter of James and Ellen (Gillespie) Porter; he, James Porter, being the brother-in-law of the emigrant Nathaniel, and having emigrated from County Londonderry, Ireland, shortly after the arrival in America of Nathaniel Ewing and his half-brothers and sister. Children of this union were:

1. Mary, born April 1, 1767; died August 31, 1845, at Allegheny, Pennsylvania; married Nathaniel Breading, as above stated.

2. William Porter, born May (or December) 19, 1769; died October 21, 1827, Fayette County, Pennsylvania; married Mary Conwell, 1791. They had a son, John H., born

October 5, 1796, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, who married a daughter of James Blaine, son of Colonel Ephraim Blaine of Revolutionary fame. It may be here remarked that this James Blaine was also the father of Ephraim Blaine II, who married Maria Gillespie, daughter of Neil Gillespie, Jr., and his wife, Miss Purcell, of Centerville, Washington County, Pennsylvania; from which union were born seven children, among them the illustrious United States Senator and statesman from Maine, James G. Blaine, defeated for the Presidency of the United States by Grover Cleveland, in 1884.

3. Ellen (or Eleanor), born August 3, 1774; married William Oliphant; lived and died near Marietta, Ohio.

4. Nathaniel, born April 10, 1772; died August 6, 1846, near Vincennes, Indiana.

5. James, born September 25, 1776; married Rebecca Morgan, and died 1859, in Missouri, leaving sons and daughters, having previously lived in Prince Edward County, Virginia, where he married, subsequently removing in 1843-1844 to Chariton County, Missouri. Their youngest daughter married Dr. Dewey, of Keytesville, Missouri, to whom was born a daughter who married Andrew Mackay, of St. Louis, Missouri.

He (George Ewing) was a Commissary under appointment of Colonel Ephraim Blaine to purchase for the Army, and under this appointment he bought and sent goods, upon his own personal responsibility, to Washington's Army at Valley Forge, in the winter of 1777. The Government being unable to pay the debts he thus incurred, his individual property was all sold to satisfy them, leaving him and his family destitute; he died, and the family was taken to Fayette County, Pennsylvania, 1786, by his son-in-law, Nathaniel Breeding.

Nathaniel Ewing, son of George and grandson of the emigrant Nathaniel Ewing, married October 1, 1793, Ann Breeding. Their children were: Mary, born June 16, 1794; died November 3, 1865; married February 26, 1818, Dr. William Carr Lane. Rachel, born June 10, 1796; died January 24, 1836; married May 3, 1820, Daniel Jencks, of Terre Haute, Indiana. George W. born March 4, 1798; died September 15, 1838; married May 11, 1837, Grace H. Law, Vincennes, Indiana. James, born April 6, 1800; died March 10, 1877; married July, 1860, Eliza Shaw. Eliza, born August 3, 1802; died July, 1808. Sarah, born July 12, 1804; died March 10, 1877; married November 28, 1822, John Law. Harriet, born February 9, 1807; died August 10, 1877; married November 29, 1826, James Farrington. William Lane, born January 31, 1809; died October 22, 1873. Caroline Sidney, born February 11, 1811; married November 21, 1833, George W. Mears. Nathaniel, born April 13, 1815; died November, 1816.

The father of these children, Nathaniel Ewing, the younger, was a man of remarkable ability. He was at one time head of the Newark Academy, Delaware, being induced to accept the position by his uncle, Rev. John Ewing, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He removed to Vincennes, Indiana, in 1807, to fill an appointment from the Government as Receiver of Public Moneys; subsequently he became a member of the Territorial Legislature, and was distinguished for legislative talents of a high order; he was one of the men who, in spite of great opposition, insisted that Indiana, upon her admission to the Union, should be a free State. He died at Mont Clair, Indiana, in 1846, aged seventy-four, having exerted mentionable influence upon the period in which he lived.¹

The descendants of Nathaniel Ewing have, in a marked degree, left their impress upon the history of St. Louis, and are still making history; and to a very notable one of them, we now direct attention.

William Lane Ewing, son of Nathaniel and Ann (Breading) Ewing, was born at Mont Clair, the family homestead, near Vincennes, Indiana; and after enjoying a successful business career of several years, he embarked, on January 1, 1839, in the wholesale grocery and commission business in St. Louis, Missouri, with Pierre A. Berthold and Louis P. Tesson. The firm of Berthold & Ewing won a high place in the business world, and was rapidly advancing to fame and fortune when, in 1849, the business was destroyed by fire. Mr. Ewing, nothing daunted by the unexpected calamity, soon resumed business under the name of William L. Ewing & Co., which became one of the largest establishments in the city. He was identified with many private and public enterprises, and was much honored; he was president of the Merchants National Bank, a member of the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association, was one of the original members of the Merchants' Exchange, and a stockholder and director in numerous other enterprises of importance to the city and State. He died October 26, 1873, at Dailey Springs, near Florence, Alabama, where he had gone for his health, and was buried in Calvary Cemetery, St. Louis, Missouri.¹

William Lane Ewing, married February, 1838, Claire Berthold, sister of his partner, Pierre A. Berthold, and daughter of Bartholomew and Pelagie C. Berthold. Their children were: Auguste Berthold, born April 6, 1839; married September 8, 1869, Mary McCausland. Ann Emily, born August 26, 1841. William Lane, born March 16, 1843; married July 17, 1883, Mary Fleming. Nathaniel P., born January 23, 1845; died May 13, 1846. Pelagie Isabel, born November 19, 1846; married October 4, 1865, Charles T. Taylor. George, born April 9, 1848; died September 6, 1853. James, born April 13, 1850; died April 21, 1852. Ernest L., born July 14, 1851; died July 30, 1852. Emily Kennedy, born March 2, 1853; died February 13, 1869. Frederick Berthold, born March 2, 1853; died February 10, 1897; married September 11, 1878, J. Valle. Clara Louise, born September 7, 1855; married February 27, 1878, William Sidney Wilson.

Ann Emily Ewing, daughter of William Lane Ewing, married (1) July 1, 1865, William Covington Mitchell, and (2) February 19, 1879, George W. Kerr. From her marriage with William Covington Mitchell was born a number of children, among them Clara Pelagie, born November 24, 1867; died April 20, 1901; married November 26, 1890, Malcolm Macbeth, a prominent real estate and financial agent of St. Louis, Missouri. Their children, Clara Mitchell Macbeth, born October 25, 1893; George Kerr, born September 24, 1896; D. St. Julien, born September 13, 1898; Malcolm Mitchell, born April 20, 1901; Agnes Pearson, born and died April 20, 1901.

A distinguished branch of the Ewings, which we accredit to this emigration, descends from Nathaniel Ewing, of or near Charlotte, and afterwards of Statesville, North Carolina, who was a soldier in the War of the Revolution, a member of Capt. James Houston's Company, and engaged in the battles of Ramsour's Mill, Kings Mountain and Cowpens. He married a daughter of Col. Alexander Osborne,² and a son of this union was Adlai Osborne Ewing, who married Sophia Goodrich Gillespie Wallis.

²Wheeler's History of North Carolina, Vol. II, pp. 216, 232, 368.

A son of this last marriage, John Wallis Ewing (1808-1855), married Maria McClelland Stevenson (1802-1883), daughter of James Stevenson and Nancy Young Brevard,¹ in Christian County, Kentucky, October 12, 1830, later removing to Woodford County, Illinois. They had seven children: Adlai, died in infancy; Nancy Jane, married E. B. Winchester in 1854, and they were the parents of five children; James Stevenson,² whose career has been elsewhere mentioned herein, married Catherine Spencer, June, 1866, and they were the parents of six children; William Gillespie, married Ruth Goodrich in April, 1865, and from this union there were three children: Henry A., married March, 1866, Elizabeth J. Merriman, of Hinsdale, Massachusetts, and from this marriage there were seven children; Adlai Thomas, married Kate Hyde, of New York, and to them were born four children.

Issue of Henry A. Ewing and Elizabeth J. Merriman:

1. Henry Wallis, born November 17, 1867; married August 5, 1893, Alice Elizabeth Sweet, born February 4, 1869. Children: Henry Wallis, born September 5, 1894; married March 3, 1918, Mary Arden Kelley, born November 25, 1894. In the War with Germany, he was 1st Lieutenant, 131 Field Artillery, American Expeditionary Forces, in France, stationed at Coetquiban, 1918; Abbie Jane, born August 1, 1897; Lucius Winchester, born May 31, 1901; Lawrence B., born May 31, 1901, died 1902; Alice Sweet, born January 6, 1906, and Adlai Merriman, born August 24, 1912.
2. May Brevard, born December 24, 1869; married June 15, 1893, Charles F. Scott, born September 7, 1866. Children: Ewing Carruth, born August 28, 1894; Ruth Merriman, born December 30, 1897; Angelo Campbell, born November 17, 1899; Charles F., born February 14, 1908.
3. Adlai Merriman, born January 22, 1872; married June 16, 1896, Mary Ella Taylor, born August 1, 1875. Child: Anne McMillin, born January 30, 1897.
4. Elliott Winchester, born April 13, 1874; died August 19, 1891.
5. Richard Avery, born May 20, 1877, married Lulu Jane Myers, February 22, 1900. Children: Elizabeth Merriman, born March 6, 1901; James B., born September 18, 1902; Grace Vernon, born September 16, 1904; Ruth born December 23, 1907.

6. Ruth Stevenson, born May 4, 1880; married Perry O. Hanson, June, 1902. Children: Eleanor, born July 14, 1903; Richard Ewing, born October 31, 1905; Ada Ruth, born September 8, 1907; Margaret Merriman, born July 12, 1909; Elizabeth Moody, born September 13, 1914.

7. Sarah Catherine, born December 8, 1882; married Alexander R. Stroup, June 29, 1907. Children: Wilson Elliott, born May 2, 1908; Henry Ewing, born March 22, 1910; Robert D., born May 21, 1912; Mary Elizabeth, born November 8, 1914.

Eliza Ann Ewing, born October 20, 1809, was the daughter of Adlai Osborne Ewing and Sophia Goodrich Gillespie, and hence a sister of John Wallis Ewing. She married John Turner Stevenson (1808-1857), son of James Stevenson and Nancy Young Brevard, and from this union was born, October 23, 1835, the distinguished statesman before mentioned, Adlai Ewing Stevenson, twice Democratic nominee for Vice President of the United States.¹

The other children of this union were, Sophia Elizabeth, born July 23, 1833; James Bell, born October 10, 1838; died December 11, 1889; William W., born August 15, 1840; Fielding Alexander, born September 23, 1844; John Calvin, born September 27, 1847, and Thomas W., born August 16, 1851.

Adlai Ewing Stevenson, married December 20, 1866, Letitia Green, who was born January 8, 1843. Their children were, Lewis Green, born August 15, 1868; Mary Eliza, born September 18, 1872; died January 18, 1895; Julia Scott, born June 30, 1874, and Letitia Ewing, born June 22, 1876.

Still another branch of this emigration is the family of George Ewing, identified with the early history of Houston, Texas, where his son, Nathaniel Ewing, a prominent citizen, now resides. He was a companion of Bowie and Travis, and an Alcalde of Austin's First Colony, in the days of the Republic.

The descendants of this emigration, often referred to as the Cecil County emigration, are scattered throughout the Union, with their firm impress everywhere on the Nation's progress, but they are perhaps more numerous in Pennsylvania, Virginia, parts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and in Indiana and Illinois, than in the other States.

¹Who's Who in America, 1903-1905, page 1420.

CHAPTER IV

WILLIAM EWING, EMIGRANT: HIS BIRTH, CHILDREN, AND FAMILY DISTINCTION

was, as we have seen, of unmixed Scotch ancestry, but was probably born in County Londonderry, Ireland, about 1710, and there married to an Irish girl, making his descendants Scotch-Irish, as they unquestionably are.

It has also been shown that this emigrant first settled in Pennsylvania, and later removed to Virginia, where he died, and that some of the family then took up their abode in Georgia, descendants branching out to other States, notably Texas.

The children* of the emigrant, William Ewing, were as follows:

1. Henry, whose career and descendants will be given in a succeeding chapter.
2. Andrew, whose career and descendants will also be given in a separate chapter.
3. John, whose career and children will be similarly stated in a separate chapter.
4. Elizabeth, married Hugh Devier.
5. Nancy, married a Mr. Hogshett.

We have no record of the descendants of these daughters.

True to the family distinction in the old country, descendants of the emigrant William soon became prominent in America.

Henry Ewing, one of the sons, removed to Kentucky, where he has descendants, some of them quite noted for achievements of a high order.

Andrew Ewing, another son, removed to Tennessee, where he was actively connected with the early development of Nashville, having been one of its founders. His descendants are numerous, many of them quite prominent,

*The names of children are numbered 1, 2, 3, etc.; grandchildren are numbered (1), (2), (3), etc.; and where clearness requires, great grandchildren are numbered 1st, 2nd, 3rd, etc., after which letters are used.

among whom are included Judge Robert Ewing, a man of lofty character and splendid abilities, who made as Mayor of the City of Nashville an enviable record.

Caruthers Ewing, the eminent lawyer of Memphis, Tennessee, is probably of this branch, but authentic information to that effect has not been obtained.

Another worthy scion of the family is Felix Grundy Ewing, now living like his ancestors did of old, at his country-seat, "Glen Raven," near Cedar Hill, Tennessee, maternally descended from the illustrious Felix Grundy (1777-1840), born in Virginia, Chief Justice of Kentucky (1807), twice a member of Congress from Tennessee, in 1829 a Senator and an active supporter of President Jackson, and (1838) appointed Attorney General of the United States.¹

CHAPTER VIII

CHARLES EWING, THE EMIGRANT: HIS BIRTH, CAREER, MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

CHARLES EWING

the emigrant, was quite prominent in the early history of Virginia, as indicated by the public records.¹

Among the references to him is an ancient record of Bedford County, showing that on March 24, 1755, he with other "Vestrymen," took "usual oaths to his Majesty's person and government," conforming to the "doctrine and discipline of the Church of England."²

He died in the year 1770, leaving a will that was admitted to probate July 24, 1770, in Bedford County, Virginia.

Surviving him were his wife, Martha, daughter of Rev. Caleb Baker, and seven sons and two daughters. The sons were Charles, William, Robert, Samuel, George, David and Caleb. The daughters were Mary and Martha. The widow Martha was a sister of Mary Baker, the wife of the emigrant Robert Ewing; in other words, the brothers married sisters.

The son William left a will, admitted to probate on April 23, 1810, in which he refers to his wife Anna, to his three brothers, Charles, George and David, and to Polly and Betsy as heirs of his brother Caleb, and to Mitchell Ewing, "his brother's son," necessarily the son of the brother Robert, or the brother Samuel.

This Mitchell Ewing, grandson of the emigrant Charles Ewing, married on December 27, 1797, Phebe Cox, and later, on March 25, 1805, married Nancy Beard, daughter of Samuel Beard.

William E. Ewing, son of William Ewing and grandson of Mitchell Ewing just mentioned, is now living near Franklin, Nebraska, on a farm, enjoying that simple pastoral life which has been associated in all ages with the best and purest in aspiration and deed.

He, William E. Ewing, was born May 1, 1853; was graduated in the Class of 1876 from what is now the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, at Blacksburg. He married, December 18, 1878, Eliza Cofer, of Bedford County, Virginia, and from the union were born Lydia Buford, died unmarried; Lewis, now residing at Santa Anna, California; Loula, married Calvin Ball, and resides at Guide Rock, Nebraska; Ella, married Crenshaw Sprout, residence Yuma, Colorado; Edward M., resides at Cogswell, North Dakota; Charles G. and Alice Lee, both of whom reside at Franklin, Nebraska.

The descendants of the emigrant Charles Ewing are numerous, but are widely scattered, and owing to this fact and loss of records from the ravages of war and time, we have not succeeded in gathering authentic information of many of them, though many have had successful and distinguished careers.

CHAPTER IX

ROBERT EWING, THE EMIGRANT: HIS BIRTH, CAREER, MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN

was a man of distinguished ability, evidently a leader in his community, of determined character and resolute purpose in the execution of his plans and designs.

He was born in County Londonderry, Ireland, probably at or near Coleraine, about 1715-1725, and finally settled, as we have seen, with his brother Charles, in what is now Bedford County, Virginia. Some of his residence in Virginia is understood to have been in what was at the time Augusta County.

He qualified on June 22, 1754, under commission from the King (George II), as one of the Justices of the County Court for Bedford County, which was a court of general jurisdiction, with records and a clerk, having chancery powers besides other jurisdiction, and in that capacity he served for a number of years, the records showing that he was serving on July 22, 1754; on May 24, 1756, and on June 25, 1771.¹

He was appointed and presided as one of the Judges of the "Court of Oyer and Terminer" to try for murder one Hampton, who was convicted and hanged.²

He was a member of Captain Thomas Buford's volunteer company, raised in Bedford County, which constituted a part of the army under General Andrew Lewis (Lord Dunmore's War) in the battle with the Indians at Point Pleasant, October 10, 1774.³

It appears that he made a payment to the County in 1756 for provisions for the Militia.⁴

On August 27, 1770, he received a grant of 194 acres of land.⁵

In religion he was a Presbyterian, an elder in that church; and he was the first signer (probably the author) of a remarkable petition, full of point and vigor, from Peaks of Otter Presbyterian Church, Bedford County, May, 1774, to the General Assembly of Virginia, asking that the elders thereof be enabled to take and hold land and slaves (O tempora! O mores!) to the use of the minister under proper regulations. This petition was signed, among others, by Charles Ewing, Robert Ewing, Jr., William Boyd, John Ewing, Adam Linn, William Ewing, Joseph Linn, Adam Linn, Abraham Ewin (sic), James Boyd and Caleb Ewing.¹

The records of Bedford County disclose a deed, dated July 28, 1783, recorded August 25, 1783, of which Robert was the first signer, and from its vigorous style, probably the author, conveying certain slaves in trust to the elders of the Peaks of Otter Presbyterian Church, the profits of said slaves or their issue to be used for supporting a regular minister, and for such other church purposes as the elders and a majority of the congregation might agree upon. This deed was signed, among others, by William Ewing and John Ewing.

As indicative of Robert's public spirit, we note that on March 24, 1783, he wrote to the Governor of Virginia, from Bedford County, informing him that the Sheriff had refused to give security for collection of taxes, and intimating very strongly that under the situation the people of Bedford County, though it was one of the first inland counties of the State, were not inclined to pay as demanded.²

Both Robert and Charles lived in Bedford County until their deaths, Robert's death occurring in May or June, 1787, his will being dated March 2, 1786, with a codicil dated May 14, 1787, and having been filed for probate in the Bedford County Court, June 25, 1787, as shown by the county records. The will disposed of considerable land, both in Virginia and Kentucky, the ownership in Kentucky being explained by the fact that at least much of Kentucky was carved out of Augusta County, Virginia.

He, the emigrant Robert Ewing, married about 1747-1750, Mary Baker, the children of which marriage (order of birth unknown) were, as follows:

1. Sidney Ann, died prior to the death of her father; married Adam Linn.
2. John, married Martha (surname unknown.)
3. Martha (Betty) who married Capt. John Mills of Botetourt County, Va.
4. Robert (q. v.).

¹Virginia Historical Magazine, Volume 12, pages 417 to 421.

²Calendar of Virginia State Papers, Vol. IV, p. 459.

5. Baker, probably one of the eldest sons.
6. Young, also probably an elder son.
7. Urban, died in Cooper County, Mo., about 1828; married Mary (Polly) Ewing, daughter of George Ewing.
8. Reuben, born 1766, died 1823; married Frances Whitsett.
9. Polly (Patty), married John Ewing, son of George Ewing.
10. Chatham, born in Bedford County, Va., 1770; died in Lafayette County, Mo.; married Elizabeth Campbell.
11. Jane, married Peter Kelley, a soldier of the Revolution.
12. Finis, the youngest child, born in Bedford County, Va., July 10, 1773; died at Lexington, Mo., July 4, 1841; married Jan. 15, 1793, Margaret Davidson.

MARY BAKER EWING

the wife of the emigrant, Robert Ewing, was, as stated, the sister of Martha who was the wife of the brother, Charles Ewing.

She was probably born in Virginia, in what became Prince Edward County, about the year 1730; her father was Rev. Caleb Baker, a prominent Presbyterian clergyman of that county, and evidently a man of strong will and sterling qualities of character.

Of her personal history, we have ascertained nothing further, but surely the mother of a galaxy of sons like hers, who are accredited by history so uniformly with worthy achievements of high order, must have been richly endowed with those attributes which make "a perfect woman, nobly planned."

CHAPTER XI.

JOHN, BAKER, YOUNG, URBAN, REUBEN AND CHATHAM
. EWING, SONS OF ROBERT AND MARY (BAKER) EWING .
AND THEIR DESCENDANTS.

JOHN EWING

son of Robert and Mary (Baker) Ewing, was born in Bedford County, Va.

He and his wife Martha, had a son Robert (Bartus), mentioned in the will of the emigrant Robert Ewing, and a daughter Sidney, who married in 1793 Micajah Roland, and another daughter, name not known, who married a Mr. Frazier.

John was one of the executors named in the will of his father, Robert Ewing.

BAKER EWING

son of Robert and Mary (Baker) Ewing, was born in Bedford County, Virginia.

He was a delegate to the General Assembly from Lincoln County, Ky., in 1788; was first Registrar of the Kentucky Land Office from June 26, 1792, to 1798, and was a member of the Kentucky Legislature, from Franklin County, in 1802. He seems to have been, at one period at least, a merchant, as he was taxed for a retail store in Franklin County, Ky., June, 1797.

YOUNG EWING

son of Robert and Mary (Baker) Ewing, was born in Bedford County, Va.

From the records of Christian County, Kentucky, it appears that Young Ewing was thrice married. The name of his first wife is unknown; by her he had a daughter, Polly B., who married Ephraim B. Davidson. His second wife was Winefred Warren, and his third, Evelina A. Jennings.¹ Whether he had other children by these subsequent marriages has not been ascertained.

He was one of the three original Magistrates of Logan County, Ky., in 1792; was Justice of the Peace, Logan County 1794; member of the Kentucky Legislature from Logan County, 1795; one of the first Trustees of Newton Academy, established by the Kentucky Legislature, Dec. 22, ¹Deed Records of Christian County, Kentucky, and Perrin's History of Christian County.

1798; member of the Kentucky Constitutional Convention, Christian County, 1799; an elder in the Cumberland Presbytery in 1804; member of the Kentucky Legislature, 1800-1807; member of Kentucky State Senate, 1808-1816, 1819-1826; Presidential Elector 1824; and Colonel in the War of 1812.

Contemplating the career of this distinguished man, we are led to recall what is said by a local historian, in referring to the Ewings:

"One of the eras in the history of Logan County, Kentucky, is referred to as 'When the Ewings came and brought the law with them.'"

URBAN EWING

son of Robert and Mary (Baker) Ewing, was born in Bedford County, Virginia, about 1828; moved to Logan County, Kentucky, about 1796, and was a member of the Kentucky Legislature from Logan County, 1803, 1807, 1809, 1811, 1814, 1816; was a soldier in the war of 1812. He moved to Cooper County, Missouri, about 1818-1819, where he lived until his death, being buried there in the Lebanon Cumberland Presbyterian graveyard.

CHAPTER XII.

FINIS EWING, YOUNGEST SON OF ROBERT AND MARY (BAKER)
EWING, AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FINIS EWING

the twelfth child and youngest son of Robert and Mary (Baker) Ewing, was born in Bedford County, Virginia, July 10, 1773, died at Lexington, Missouri, July 4, 1841.

He moved to what is now Tennessee, with his older brothers and sisters, after the death of their father, and settled about six miles north of Nashville, Davidson County, near the Spring Hill Church; removed to Logan County, Kentucky, in 1794, and settled about eight miles from Russellville, near the Red River Meeting House. Began preaching in 1800, and was ordained by the Cumberland Presbytery in November, 1803. The Cumberland Presbytery seceded in December, 1809, and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church was organized February 10, 1810, by Finis Ewing, assisted by Samuel McAdoo, Samuel King and Ephraim McLean.

He, Finis Ewing, removed to Christian (now Todd) County, Kentucky, about 1811-1812; lived at Ewingsville post office, was post master of Ewingsville, and had pastoral charge of the Lebanon congregation.

He left Kentucky for Missouri in May, 1820, settled in Cooper County, Missouri; established there Ewingsville post office, and was post master, and organized the New Lebanon congregation.

He was appointed Registrar of the Land Office by President Jackson in 1830, and held that office until 1841.

He removed to Lafayette County, Missouri, in 1832, and settled first near Lexington, and in 1836 moved to Lexington, where he lived until his death.

His sermons have been published, and a biography has been written of him, entitled "Ewing, Rev. Finis E., one of the Fathers and Founders of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church."

He married in Davidson County, Tennessee, January 15, 1793, Margaret Davidson, born January 23, 1774, died December 12, 1868, daughter of General William Lee Davidson, born 1746, and killed in the War of the Revolution, while serving as a General on the side of Independence, at the battle of Cowan's Ford on the Catawba River, February 1, 1781. He had succeeded Griffith Rutherford in command. ¹ Mary Brevard, wife of General William Davidson, and mother of Finis's wife, Margaret, was the daughter of John Brevard and his wife, nee McWhorter. An interesting biography has been written of General Davidson's wife, Mary Brevard, entitled "Aunt Peggy."

CHAPTER XIII.

ROBERT EWING II., SON OF ROBERT AND MARY (BAKER) EWING; HIS BIRTH, CAREER, MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN.

ROBERT EWING II

son of Robert Ewing I and Mary Baker, (q. v.), was born in Bedford County, Virginia, 1760, died in Logan County, Kentucky, July 14, 1832; buried in the old Red River Churchyard, about five miles northeast of Adairville, Kentucky.

He was one of the signers of the petition of the Peaks of Otter Presbyterian Church, Bedford County, Virginia, May, 1774, to the General Assembly of Virginia.

He was a soldier in the War of the Revolution.

He moved to Davidson County, Tennessee, then North Carolina, in 1784; was a member of the North Carolina Legislature from Davidson County, 1787-1789, and was a member of the North Carolina Convention of 1789 for adoption of the United States Constitution.

He moved to Logan County, Kentucky, in 1792; was a member of the Kentucky Legislature, from Logan County, 1797; member of the Kentucky State Senate, 1806-1818, and President of the Senate, 1818.

He was Presidential Elector in 1808, and again in 1812, and again in 1816.

He was commissioned Brigadier General, December 19, 1799, commanding the 11th Kentucky Brigade, including regiments of Logan, Henderson, Muhlenburg, Christian and Livingston Counties.

He was Brigadier General in the War with Great Britain in 1812.

The inscription on his tombstone is suggestive of his illustrious career, and his fine qualities of character. It follows:

IN MEMORY OF

GENERAL ROBERT EWING,

"A Soldier of the Revolution, who departed this life 14th of July, 1832, in the 73rd year of his age. He was born in Virginia in 1760, removed to West Tennessee in 1781, from whence he was elected and served two sessions in the North Carolina Legislature. Was married to Jane McLean on the 4th of July, 1787; removed to Logan County, Kentucky, in 1792; was elected to the Legislature of Kentucky in 1797 and served 21 years in succession, sixteen (16) in the Senate and the last two as its President. He was the Oracle of his family, and among his neighbors, emphatically a Peacemaker."

As we read that epitaph of service, speaking to us from the moldering dust of a hero who toiled in the wilderness of the land we love, we are much impressed by what is said in Foote's Sketches, page 83, in these words:

"Men will not be able to understand till they have opened the treasures of history and drawn forth some few particulars respecting the origin and religious habits of the Scotch-Irish and become familiar with their doings previous to the Revolution—during the painful struggle—and the succeeding years of prosperity."

He, Robert Ewing II, married at Adairville, Logan County, Kentucky, July 4, 1787, Jane McLean. Issue:

CHAPTER XIV.

THE MCLEAN* TREE: LINEAGE OF JANE MCLEAN, WIFE OF ROBT. EWING II.

The McLean family was among the most illustrious of the clans of the Scottish Highlands, famous in achievement and of ancient ancestry. The name is authoritatively stated to have originally been written "Mac-Ghille-eain," reduced under Gaelic contraction to Gilleain, meaning "Servant of St. John." The family is said to trace with precision to "Old Dougall of Scone," from whom through several generations was descended Gilleain, the first chief and founder, about 1250, of the Clan Mac Gilleain, afterwards abbreviated to McLean. The clan originated in the Island of Mull, which is separated from the mainland of Scotland by the Sound of Mull on the north and the Firth of Lorn on the east. After defeat of the Danes by Somerled, Thane of Argyle, Mull and Morvern became free. Subsequently Angus Og MacDonald, fifth in descent from Somerled, received for faithful services rendered to Robert Bruce considerable land, including the island of Mull, and on July 12, 1390, granted to Lachlan MacLean, probably the fifth chief of the clan, a large estate in Mull and other isles. It would be interesting, but tedious in detail, to pursue the history of the clan through the periods of its successive chiefs,, one of whom (Lachlan Og, 8th Chief) married Catherine, daughter of Colin Campbell, 1st Earl of Argyle; therefore, lest interest should lag, we pass over as undecisive of any controlling event, the intermediate history down to Lachlan, 16th Chief, whose leadership began in the earlier part of the seventeenth century. The clan was then at the zenith of great power and influence, and was in high favor with Charles I, King of England, who, about 1631, created the chief of baronet by the title of Sir Lachlan MacLean of Morvern. But the outskirts of this promising sky were fringed with dark clouds. The civil wars which resulted in the decapitation of King Charles I changed into hostility the attitude of the kingly power towards the clans, which unfriendliness was encouraged by jealousies among the clans themselves, notably the Clan Mac Lean, the Clan Mac Donald, and the Campbells, the latter Marquises of Argyle. Oppressive laws soon followed, among them the disarming act by which the clans were deprived of their weapons under heavy penalties, and worse still, the act forbidding the national costume of the Highlands, under penalty for second offense of transportation, and compelling the use of the Lowland garb, so despised by the Highlanders. These and other acts of oppression, notably religious persecutions, which we have already described, drove thousands of Highlanders from their native heath, sadly and tearfully, many immigrating to America, among them the ancestors of the McLeans of whom we are writing.¹

son of Mr. and Mrs. John McLean, of Scotland, latter daughter of Ephraim Moore of that country, was born in Scotland in 1730, and immigrated for America with his elder brother Charles in 1750, settling in Western North Carolina, where in 1761 he married Elizabeth Davidson, daughter of John Davidson.²

He, Ephraim McLean (name sometimes by clerical inadvertence written McLain or McClain), was a recognized patriot of the Revolution. He was probably a member of the Convention which adopted the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, and was certainly a member, present and actively assisting, at an important meeting of the Committee of Safety, which was a sort of legislative body created for the purpose of aiding the cause of Independence, and he was a member of the House of Commons of the General Assembly of North Carolina, from Burke County (which was formed from Rowan County), for the year 1778, and a senator from such county for the years 1779-1780, which was a service promotive of the cause of Independence.³

He was probably also a soldier for Independence in the War of the Revolution, and severely wounded in the Battle of King's Mountain, fighting against immediate relatives in the British Army commanded by a Scotchman, Patrick Ferguson.⁴

He shortly after removed to Harrodsburg, Kentucky, thence to about four miles above Nashville, Tennessee, where he settled on a tract of 600 acres in the bend of the

Cumberland River, known as "McLean Bend;" in the Nashville Centennial, 1880, he was referred to in a history of the early settlement, then published in the newspapers, as having been one of the three school trustees a hundred years before; he returned to Harrodsburg about that time, and near the close of that century removed to Maury County, Tennessee, and settled on Knobb Creek, where he remained until about 1820, when he went, at the advanced age of 90 years, to spend his remaining days with his sons, Alney and Robert, in Kentucky, where he died in 1823 at 93 years of age.¹

By his marriage, he had eleven children, besides a daughter dying in infancy, who was the last child. They were nine sons and two daughters, as follows:

1. John, born 1762, and was killed by the Indians.
2. George, born 1764, married his cousin, the eldest daughter of General William Davidson, and settled in Logan County, Kentucky, about 12 miles west of Russellville, where he lived, reared a family and died. His youngest son, Andrew Jackson, lived on a farm in that vicinity and died there in 1884 at 76 years of age.
3. Ephraim, born 1766, and died in Tennessee, and was buried on Snow Creek, Maury County, in that State.
4. JANE, born 1769, married General Robert Ewing, and was the mother of Justice Ephraim McLean Ewing (q. v.)
5. Mrs. Robert (McLean) Brank, born 1770, and was the mother of two sons, Houston and Ephraim; the latter, a lawyer, was a student under Judge Alney McLean.
6. Samuel, born 1772, lived and died near Lawrenceburg, in Tennessee.
7. Alney, born 1774, a lawyer and jurist, who married and had children, including (1) William, a farmer; (2) Thornton, a Presbyterian minister of distinction, who resided in Mississippi and there died; (3) Robert Davidson, who was a lawyer and jurist (Judge of Circuit Court), lived in Grenada, Mississippi, and died there in the yellow fever epidemic of 1878, as did his wife, two daughters and a son; (4) A daughter Eliza Ann (McLean) McBride, and (5) a daughter Tabitha, who is understood to have been quite accomplished and learned. She never married.
8. Charles, born 1776, lived in Maury County, Tennessee, until 1811, and died in Rutherford County, Tennessee, in 1825. He married in 1799, Sallie Vance, who died in 1847 at the age of 69 years. From this union were born ten children, six sons, namely, David, Ephraim Baxter, Charles Grandison, William (M. D.), Robert Brank and Alney, and four daughters, Susan Howard Davidson, Priscilla Brank McCutcheon, Sarah Jane Baird and Cynthia Nadley. All lived and died in Tennessee except Dr. William McLean, who lived and died in Tyler County, Texas, and Mrs. McCutcheon, who lived and died in Arkansas. The son Alney, who is the author of the sketch to which reference is herein made, lived at Middleton, Tennessee. He married in 1845, when he was 30 and she was 18 years of age, Martha J. Moore, a sister of Honorable William R. Moore, of Memphis, Tennessee, who was elected to Congress from that District in 1882. From this union were born several sons, including Robert Moore, William Watkins, Walter Baxter, and four daughters, Fannie, who married L. B. Jarmon, a baptist minister, and Sallie, who married H. H. Norman, a farmer, and Ella, who married W. S. Early of Nashville, and Lela Vance, all of whom lived in Tennessee.

9. William, born 1778, lived and died in Tennessee, and was buried on Snow Creek, in Maury County. He married and had three sons, Andrew, William and Samuel, the first named of whom lived in Nashville, and the others in Marshall County, Tennessee.

10. James, born 1780, and lived and died in Hinds County, Mississippi. He married and had one son, Dr. Ephraim McLean, and a daughter, Eliza Hannah, who married and lived at Hot Springs, Arkansas.

11. Robert, born 1782, at Harrodsburg, Kentucky. He married a Miss Wilson, by whom he had five children, three sons and two daughters. The eldest son, Robert, was a physician in Muhlenberg County, Kentucky; the sons Edward and Alney went with their father to Mississippi and settled there. The daughter Celia married Robert Russell, and lived in Clarksville, Tennessee. The other daughter was Eliza.¹

Ephraim McLean, the subject of this division, was a magistrate of Rowan County, North Carolina, under appointment December 23, 1778.²

(2) "In his services as a civil officer, being a member of the House of Commons, of the General Assembly of North Carolina, from Burke County (which was formed from Rowan County) for the year 1778, and a Senator from Burke County for the years 1779 and 1780, which was promotive of the cause of Independence."¹ wife of Ephraim McLean, was born about 1743, died about 1820; married, as before stated, in 1761.

The Davidsons came to Western North Carolina from near Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania, probably Lancaster County. George Davidson was the father of General William Lee Davidson, born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, 1746, who was killed, as we have seen, in an engagement with Cornwallis at Cowan's Ford on the Catawba River, February 1, 1781.² Robert Davidson, of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, was the father of John Davidson, born December 15, 1735, Major in the War of the Revolution, and a signer of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, who married Violet Wilson, daughter of Samuel Wilson.³ John Davidson (not Major John Davidson) was the father of Elizabeth Davidson, wife of Ephraim McLean and mother of Jane McLean (q. v.), and of William Davidson, Colonel in the War of the Revolution, and he was also probably the father of the John Davidson who married Nancy Brevard, and of the Ephraim Davidson who married Jane Brevard.⁴

were probably brothers as they all appear to have come from near Philadelphia, the near-by county of Lancaster, in Pennsylvania, at or about the same time, 1760, with their ages corresponding in that relationship, and the established fact that General William Lee Davidson and Colonel William Davidson were cousins, tends to confirm this conclusion.¹

The intermarriages of the illustrious Davidson and Brevard families are worthy of mention.

There were eight sons and four daughters in the family of John Brevard and his wife, who was a Miss McWhorter. Mary Brevard, the eldest daughter, married General William Lee Davidson; Nancy Brevard married John Davidson, and Jane Brevard married Ephraim Davidson, these latter two husbands being probably the sons of John Davidson, the father of Elizabeth Davidson, wife of Ephraim McLean. It may be remarked that the fourth Brevard daughter, Rebecca, married a Mr. Jones, and moved to Tennessee.² Alexander Brevard, one of the eight sons mentioned, married Sallie Davidson, a daughter of Major John Davidson.³

John Brevard's eight sons, to-wit: Ephraim, John, Hugh, Adam, Alexander, Robert, Benjamin and Joseph, were all soldiers in the War of the Revolution, and while he, John Brevard, the father, was too old to serve as a soldier, he was a recognized patriot, who, with unflinching loyalty, rendered in every way material aid to the cause of Independence, even contributing to the soldier service his youngest son, Joseph, then under his control as only 17 years of age; and in consequence of his loyalty, he suffered as a penalty the burning of his home by the infuriated Tories, who greatly hated the Brevard family on account of its united and extensive support of the Revolutionary cause.⁴

A distinguished branch of the Davidson family sprang from William Davidson, the Colonel in the War of the Revolution, who was, as we have seen, a son of John Davidson, the father of Elizabeth Davidson, wife of Ephraim McLean.

Colonel William Davidson was the first Representative from Buncombe County in the North Carolina State Senate; he was the father of William Mitchell Davidson, of Haywood County, North Carolina, who was born January 2, 1780, died in Washington County, Texas, May 31, 1846, married January 10, 1804, Elizabeth Vance, who was born March 23, 1787, died April 15, 1861, she being the daughter of David Vance, of Revolutionary fame, who was the father of David Vance, a Captain in the War of 1812, and grandfather of "the great war Governor and Statesman of the old North State," Zebulon Vance, who was born May 13, 1830 and died April 14, 1894, while serving as United States Senator from North Carolina, having been a member of Congress, Captain and Colonel in the Confederate Army, and Governor of the State.¹

William Mitchell Davidson had a son, Colonel Allen Turner Davidson, born on Jonathan's Creek, Haywood County, North Carolina, May 9, 1819, and died at Asheville, North Carolina, January 24, 1905. He was a prominent lawyer, and represented his section in the Confederate Congress. He married, 1842, Miss Elizabeth A. Howell, and children of the marriage, worthy scions of a noble lineage, are, Honorable Theo. E. Davidson, late Attorney General of the State of North Carolina; Wilbur S. Davidson, President of the First National Bank of Beaumont, Texas; and Honorable Robert Vance Davidson, late Attorney General of Texas.

EPHRAIM MCLEAN EWING

CHAPTER XV.

EPHRAIM MCLEAN EWING, SON OF ROBERT AND JANE (MCLEAN) EWING; HIS ACHIEVEMENTS,
MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN.

EPHRAIM MCLEAN EWING

son of General Robert Ewing and Jane McLean (q. v.), was born December 4, 1789, in Davidson County, West Tennessee; went with his father in 1792 to Logan County, Kentucky, where he died June 11, 1860, being interred there in Maple Grove Cemetery.

He was prosecuting attorney of Logan County, Judge Broadnax presiding.

He was a Presidential Elector in 1821-1822, and again in 1832-1833.

He served in the Kentucky Legislature during the years 1830-1832.

He was commissioned Justice of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, being the highest court of the State, March 5, 1835,¹ and in the spring of 1843, April 11, he was appointed Chief Justice,² and served in that capacity until he resigned, which was in the spring of 1847, after the autumn term of 1846.³

In 1850, March 4, he was by Governor Crittenden appointed and served on the Commission to Codify the Laws of Kentucky.

The Biographical Encyclopedia of Kentucky, recounting his achievements, refers to him as "the son of General Robert Ewing, a distinguished Revolutionary soldier," and continues:

"He received a fine literary education and was trained in the law at Transylvania University; he lived at Russellville, Kentucky, where he became one of the most able lawyers and distinguished men of the State; he was exceptionally successful and popular, and managed to accumulate a large fortune; he was a man of finely balanced mind, solid judgment and of noble sentiments and great liberality of heart; his conscientious convictions led him to free his slaves and start them well in life for themselves. In his will, he left a handsome bequest to Bethel College, at Russellville, and Cumberland University, at Lebanon, Tennessee; he was a learned and able lawyer, and one of the most just, upright and valuable men who have lived in Southern Kentucky. He married the brilliant and accomplished Jane McIntyre," etc.

He married in Logan County, Kentucky, September 8, 1821, Jane Pope McIntyre, of Elizabethtown, Hardin County, Kentucky. Three sons were born of this marriage, Presley Underwood,* born September 1, 1822, Fayette Clay, born March 4, 1824, and Henry Quincy, born August 15, 1826, besides a son, born September 5, 1830, who died January 16, 1831.

1. PRESLEY UNDERWOOD, the eldest son, was graduated at Center College in Danville, Kentucky, in 1840; studied law with his father, then Chief Justice of State, and was graduated from the law department of Transylvania University, at Lexington, Kentucky, in 1842; then went on an European tour, and upon his return, in 1848, was elected to the Kentucky Legislature, and served in 1848-9. In 1851, he was elected to the United States Congress over a worthy and popular opponent, Beverly L. Clark, and was re-elected in 1853 without opposition. He died, unmarried, at Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, on September 27, 1854, of cholera, and was buried in Logan County, Kentucky.¹ The Biographical Encyclopedia of Kentucky says of him:

"He was the eldest son of the distinguished Judge E. M. Ewing, of the same town (Russellville), and Jane P. McIntyre, one of the most brilliant and accomplished women of her time. He was the opponent in politics of John C. Breckenridge, and served in the Legislature several times with him—both equally brilliant and commanding in appearance, equally handsome and chivalrous, and both equally matchless in their oratory; he possessed traits of character to a remarkable degree of both his parents; like his father, learned and brilliant; and like his mother, gentle, vivacious, and fond of society, in which he was a natural leader; the evening before his death he was surrounded by a charming circle of friends, who were entranced by the sweet strains he was drawing from a violin, of which instrument he was master; his untimely demise was sincerely mourned by his large acquaintance, among them a beautiful and accomplished young lady of Cincinnati, to whom it was said he was engaged to be married; on his tomb, the words 'Died ere his prime,' are a touching tribute to his memory."

George D. Prentice, the great editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, editorially referred to him in that paper at the time of his death, as follows:

"Thus has perished in the pride of early manhood one of the most brilliant young men of our State. He was a wit, a scholar, a politician, an orator, a man of genius and a statesman. Though young, he had won a distinguished position in Congress. He did not speak often in that body, but every speech added to his reputation. If his life had been spared, he would have placed himself high among the ablest and most useful men of the nation.

"The death of Mr. Ewing is a public calamity, but it will carry peculiar affliction to the hearts of many who knew him personally. He was the soul of every society in which he mingled. There are thousands who will cherish his memory, for 'none knew him but to love him.'"

2. FAYETTE CLAY, (q. v.).

3. HENRY QUINCY, the third son, who died January 5, 1858, was a lawyer of great promise, and lived and died at Russellville; he was an ardent lover of Shakespeare, and possessed of marked histrionic ability. He never married. It is said that, on an occasion, his father sent him to Chicago to look into a title he was buying, in preference to Presley, who was four years older, appraising him as the safer lawyer of the two, though Presley was undoubtedly more brilliant.

The "Ewing Lot" in Maple Grove Cemetery, at Russellville, Kentucky, besides dates of births and deaths on separate slabs, shows these inscriptions:

"Hon. Presley Ewing, Elected to the Kentucky Legislature August 1848. Re-elected August, 1849. Elected to U. S. Congress August, 1851. Re-elected August 1853. Died ere his prime."

"Jane Pope Ewing, a wife, a mother, a Christian. She is not dead but sleeping."

JANE POPE (MCINTYRE) EWING

wife of Ephraim M. Ewing, is described in every contemporaneous reference to her as one of the most brilliant and accomplished women of her time. This consensus of encomium leaves no doubt of her intellectual superiority.

She was also an inspiring wife, a devoted mother, and possessed of the Christian graces, as attested by the inscription on her tombstone.

She was born in Hardin County, Kentucky, October 30, 1795, and died in Logan County, Kentucky, August 26, 1851, where she was buried in Maple Grove Cemetery, at Russellville.

CHAPTER XVI.

DR. FAYETTE CLAY EWING, SON OF EPHRAIM MCLEAN AND JANE (MCINTYRE) EWING; HIS CAREER, MARRIAGE AND DESCENDANTS.

FAYETTE CLAY EWING

was the second son of Ephraim M. Ewing and Jane P. McIntyre; he was born in Logan County, March 4, 1824; studied medicine under his uncle, Dr. James Butler Bowling, at Adairville, in that county, and later was graduated in medicine and surgery; he then in early life went South, and settled in Thibodaux, Louisiana, Lafourche Parish, a rich sugar section, and soon enjoyed a lucrative practice in his profession, in which he became distinguished, both in medicine and surgery, notably in the treatment of yellow fever, cholera, and the malignant type of typhoid fever often prevalent in that section.

He was army surgeon of recognized superior capacity in the Civil War (C. S. A.), and was specially esteemed in his profession as a remarkable diagnostician, quick and accurate, and equally ready of execution—it was with him in life, one to decide and to do.

He married, in Assumption Parish, Louisiana, on February 3, 1852, Eliza Josephine Kittredge, the handsome and accomplished daughter of Dr. Ebenezer Eaton Kittredge and his wife, Martha Wills Green, at "Elm Hall," the luxurious home where she was born August 3, 1833. At this wedding, which was a brilliant function, the Rt. Rev. Leonidas Polk, then Episcopal Bishop of Louisiana, and afterwards General in the Confederate Army, officiated.

Dr. Ewing was an ardent democrat, particularly during the period of reconstruction, and was always a generous campaign supporter.

He acquired a large estate, consisting of three very valuable sugar plantations, in Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, bearing the names, "Raceland," "Ariel," and "Melodia," the last of which he purchased from a sale of Chicago property which his father, Judge E. M. Ewing (q. v.), shortly before dying, had given him while he was on a visit to the parental home at Russellville, Kentucky; and during the same visit, his father also gave him the family silver, including a massive sterling silver tea set, now owned by his son, Presley Kittredge (q. v.).

Dr. Ewing died at his plantation home, "Ariel," May 31, 1872, and was buried in St. John's (Episcopal) Cemetery, Thibodaux, Louisiana.

His was a life, apart from his successful worldly career, overflowing with nobility of soul, with charity for the failing, with kindness for the suffering, and at all times merciful; and he was as man and physician, with every society in which he mingled, the fascination and attraction of all.

He was tenacious of his positions, which he regarded as based on the just and right—as firm as adamant with the outer world, but with the inner circle of home, yielding as the marble, tenderly twining as the vine! The inscription on his tomb—attests the beauty of his life in the practice of his profession.

Issue of Dr. Ewing's marriage with Eliza Josephine Kittredge:

1. LEILA WILLS, born at "Elm Hall," September 7, 1851, and graduated, with first honor, from Locquet Institute, in New Orleans, Louisiana, 1873; she was married at "Ariel," Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, January 24, 1878, to the Rev. Shepard Halsey Werlein, B. A., D. D., New Orleans, Louisiana, born in that city June 23, 1851, s. of Philip Peter Werlein and his wife, Margaret Halsey. Issue:

(1) Halsey Werlein, Junior, an Episcopal minister, of fine pulpit oratory and engaging presence, late of San Jose, California, born November 1, 1878; he is a graduate of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee; Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, and in theology, of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee, and has had conferred upon him the degrees, B. A., M. A., from Vanderbilt; M. A. from Harvard, and B. D. from the University of the South. He married November 22, 1905, Sarah Elizabeth Reynolds, born July 27, 1885, daughter of Dr. Dudley S. and Mattie (Bruce) Reynolds. Children: Sarah Elizabeth, born at Jackson, Mississippi, August 22, 1909, and Mathilde Bruce, born at San Jose, California, April 7, 1912.

(2) Wilmer, born and died in Houston, Texas, January 31, 1881.

tives, Miss Margaret Reid, of Amite, Louisiana, born August 2, 1892, daughter of Judge Robert R. Reid, of that city. Child: Leila Margaret, born February 1, 1917, Washington, District of Columbia.

(4) Ewing, born August 4, 1889, a lawyer of recognized ability in Houston, Texas, having the degrees, B. S. and LL. B., from Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana; he promptly volunteered on war being declared against Germany, went into the officers' training camp at Leon Springs, near San Antonio, Texas, and after three months' training, without previous military experience, was on August 15, 1917, commissioned as Captain of the U. S. A. (Reserve), and went into active service as such officer, where he remained until honorably discharged at the end of the war. He acquitted himself throughout with distinguished ability, serving as adjutant of the Third Officers' Training School, Camp Kearny, California, and being commended in terms of great praise by the commanding General of his division for his skilful and efficient services, with direction that the commendation be placed to the credit of his army record. He also served as Company Commander in the Fourth Officers' Training School, Camp Fremont, California, as Assistant Adjutant of the Eighth (Regular Army) Division, and as Adjutant of the 115th Ammunition Train.

(5) Presley Ewing, a physician and surgeon, of New Orleans, Louisiana, having the degree, M. D. He was born September 1, 1891; married July 21, 1915, Sarah Richard, born August 13, 1891. One child: Presley Ewing, born San Jose, California, May 8, 1916. He enlisted as a volunteer in the war with Germany, was commissioned as lieutenant to the Medical Corps, assigned to Nose, Throat and Ear Department; first served at the Base Hospital, Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa, later serving with the American Expeditionary Forces, France and the U. S. Army of occupation at Coblenz, Germany.

(6) Philip Prentiss, born May 7, 1893, has degree B. A. from Tulane University; was a student for three years at Oxford, England, under a Cecil Rhodes scholarship, then returned to enter the U. S. A. in the war with Germany, in which he served under commission as lieutenant.

2. IDA MAY, born at Thibodaux, Louisiana, August 6, 1858; died in New Orleans, Louisiana, December 21, 1918; she was graduated with first honor from the Virginia married October 21, 1885, in Washington, District of Columbia, Martha Mac Donald, of that city, born 1862, daughter of James Whitsitt Mac Donald, who was a Confederate soldier, and his wife, Sarah Magdalen Cooper, daughter of Douglas H. Cooper, who was an officer of the United States Army in the war with Mexico in 1848.

In the war with Germany, Dr. Ewing served with the Medical Corps, Nose, Throat and Ear Department, at Camp Beauregard, Louisiana, with several assistants; he was at first commissioned as Captain, later as Major.

The issue of the marriage of Dr. Ewing and his wife, Martha MacDonald:

(1) Fayette Clay, born May 18, 1887; married May 14, 1913, Fairfax Cary, of Memphis, Tennessee, daughter of Hunsdon Cary, and died at Sewanee, Tennessee, without issue, November 28, 1914, in the flower of his youth, while success and honor were widening for him.

The following excerpts from the resolutions adopted at the joint meetings of the "Faculties of the University of the South," December 1, 1914, tell the story of his too brief life:

"The sudden death of Professor Ewing at Sewanee, November 28, 1914, came as a shock to his colleagues in the Faculties of the University of the South. * * * Mr. Ewing came of good stock, of a fine old Southern family distinguished for intellectual ability, as well as for learning and culture. His gifts were, doubtless, partly hereditary, but he had begun to make the most of them.

"He received his academic training in part at Sewanee, and then went to the University of Virginia, where he graduated in June, 1910, with the degree of Civil Engineer. Soon after his graduation, he secured a position in the Construction Department of the Frisco Lines, where he served about two years, and was rapidly promoted, becoming a Resident Engineer. In June, 1912, he was appointed Resident Engineer with the Vandalia Railroad (Pennsylvania Lines). In May, 1914, he became Associate Professor of Civil Engineering in the University of the South. * * * In May, 1913, he was married to Miss Fairfax Cary, of Memphis, Tennessee, a most worthy daughter of one of the oldest historic families of Virginia."

We may add that on April 24, 1911, as though premonitory of his death (which was from sudden heart failure), he wrote for the Sewanee Purple a poem, the last stanza of which follows :

“Nowhere is there a spot so fair
 As at Sewanee;
 For earth and sky are blended there,
 Down at Sewanee;
 And when life’s twilight falls for me,
 I trust it will my future be
 To rest beneath some shelt’ring tree
 In old Sewanee.”

He was buried in the beautiful forest cemetery at “old Sewanee.”

(2) Ephraim Mac Donald, now of New Orleans, Louisiana, born September 18, 1889; married March, 1914, his cousin, Olivia Munson (daughter of E. P. Munson and his wife, Nellie Jones), born at “Glenwood,” 1882. Child: Olivia Munson, born in New York City, December 28, 1915.

He has taken the degrees, A. B., M. A., Sc. D., and M. D., and has thus early in life filled the position of Associate Professor of Physiology in the University of New York and Bellevue Medical College, and also that of Acting Professor in charge of the Department of Physiology in Fordham University Medical College, New York, during 1914-1915, in the absence of Professor Knaur, who went to the European war; and, in addition to the above, he has been quoted as authority on the physiology of the heart, three times in Stewart’s Text Book of Physiology, 7th edition, a standard work; and in the last edition of Green’s Pharmacology, likewise a standard work, reference is made to his original research work, when twenty years of age, at the University of Missouri.

(3) Presley Kittredge, born July 11, 1891; married at “Glenwood,” June 11, 1911, his cousin, Myrtle Munson (daughter of E. P. Munson and his wife, Nellie Jones), born December 21, 1889; he is now a journalist, in New Orleans, Louisiana, having formerly been manager and editor-in-chief of the Hamilton Press, in Hamilton, Illinois. Children :

1ST. MYRTLE MUNSON, born March 15, 1912.

2ND. PRESLEY KITTREDGE, born August 13, 1914.

3RD. FAYETTE CLAY, born November 5, 1915.

REV. QUINCY EWING

(4) Donald MacDonald, a journalist, born April 11, 1895; was a student at the University of Missouri, and there gave fair promise, in view of remarkably good work as business manager and editor on the University publication, the Daily Missourian, of success in his chosen vocation.

After exhausting every effort to enlist for fighting service in the war with Germany, failing to get in on account of a foot ball accident, he secured a position and served as photographer in the Aviation Corps.

5. JESSIE ALINE ("Maggie"), born in New Orleans, Louisiana, May 18, 1864; died October 18, 1900, in Louisiana, near Patterson, where she was buried; she was married at "Ariel," December 23, 1880, to Charles E. Gillis, a sugar planter of Lafourche Parish, Louisiana. Issue:

(1) Ewing, born March 9, 1888; married at Gulfport, Mississippi, September 18, 1917, Martha Brown, born November 21, 1899. He volunteered promptly for service in the War with Germany, first serving as Second Lieutenant, then promoted to First Lieutenant, and later promoted to the office of Captain.

(2) Wallace, born January 21, 1890; he also volunteered for service in the war just mentioned, was not accepted, but was later drafted into service.

(3) Gary, born March 17, 1893; he as a volunteer joined the U. S. Marines in the beginning of the war, went across, and was in gallant service until the close of hostilities, having been in the engagements with the enemy in the Sectors Champagne (Blanc Mont), Argonne, St. Mihiel, Verdun, Toulon, Marbache, Soissons, and Chateau-Thierry, and participated in the march to the Rhine for the occupation of the Coblenz Bridgehead.

(4) Aline, born January 26, 1896; died and buried in New Orleans, Louisiana, September 14, 1912.

6. QUINCY, Episcopal minister and writer of renown, also successful farmer, postoffice, Napoleonville, Louisiana; born at "Ariel," January 11, 1867; was educated in the academic and theological courses, University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee; assistant minister Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, Ohio, 1890-1891; Dean Christ Church Cathedral, New Orleans, Louisiana, 1891-1893; Rector St. James Church, Greenville, Mississippi, 1895-1903, and of Church of the Advent, Birmingham, Alabama, 1903-1906, and of Christ Church, Napoleonville, since 1906; author of

"Education," "The Heart of the Race Problem," "The Higher Education," and other treatises.¹

He married in New Orleans, Louisiana, August 22, 1895, Mary Carter (Bower) Hart, a widow of that city, daughter of E. L. Bower, who was a Major in the Confederate Army; she is a cultured and highly educated woman, a descendant on her maternal side of the distinguished Carter family, of Virginia, who owned "Shirley," a beautiful and picturesque home-site, located about the point where the Appomattox enters the James, in Charles City County, which in 1723 became the home of John Carter, eldest son of Robert Carter. It stands, as has been well said, "four-square to the world, three stories high, in the midst of a lawn shaded by giant oaks."²

The issue of this marriage:

(1) Enid, born August 8, 1896, very brilliant and accomplished; she was graduated from the University of Louisiana, Baton Rouge, degree of Bachelor of Arts, with first honor, before she was eighteen years of age, and was shortly after awarded the position, at Baton Rouge, of Directress of Organized Charities, a position she filled with marked ability until her resignation, to enter Tulane University, to fit herself for a higher order of work. Later she performed service of importance with the Red Cross in the war with Germany. She is a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, with five ancestral bars. She was married July 14, 1919, at Christ Church Chapel, New Orleans, to Edward Austin Cary of Port Arthur, Texas. He served as a Lieutenant with the U. S. Aviation Corps, in the War with Germany.

(2) Quincy, junior, born February 6, 1903, a graduate of the High School, Napoleonville, Louisiana, where he gave evidence of a sharp and incisive intellect, and evinced qualities of leadership and aptitude for public speaking; he was winner in the State Spelling Test of March 29 and 30, 1917, and is now a student of Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana.

7. Kate Adelaide, a beautiful blonde, born at "Ariel," November 16, 1870; died in New Orleans, Louisiana, of pneumonia, February 5, 1884. She had at her early age written a story that was published in the Donaldsonville Chief, thus commended by the managing editor:

ELIZA JOSEPHINE (KITTRIDGE) EWING

"The composition is very creditable for one so young, and gives promise of future achievements of a brilliant character."

ELIZA JOSEPHINE (KITTRIDGE) EWING

the wife of Dr. Fayette Clay Ewing, senior, was the daughter of Dr. Ebenezer Eaton Kittredge and his wife, Martha Wills Green, and reference is made for her Kittredge and Green ancestry to the cognate branches to follow.

She was born at "Elm Hall," Assumption Parish, Louisiana, on August 3, 1833, and married on February 3, 1852; she was highly educated and a gifted musician, played the piano with great proficiency, having a remarkable touch; she spoke English and French with equal erudition and fluency. After her graduation, she traveled extensively with her father through the East, incidentally visiting his relatives in Boston, Massachusetts.

She was no ordinary woman—commanding and handsome in appearance, of superior endowments and high culture, courageous and strong of purpose, she went about daily doing her duty as she saw it, brooking no opposition in its performance; and until the last, in her eighty-first year, clear of mind and thought, and in close sympathy with the ebb and flow of life and the progress of things, she preserved what in all vicissitudes had been characteristic of her, a never-failing indomitable spirit, the same as that which Lord Lytton immortalized as present to the end in the unconquered and unconquerable Armand Richelieu.

It was a leading thought with her to have her three sons a lawyer, a physician and a minister, and having moulded their ambitions to that end, she derived great pleasure from the fact that her hope was realized, and that each was distinguished enough in his profession to appear in "Who's Who in America," among the leading men of the Nation.

Withal the tributes paid to her husband's mother, Jane Pope McIntyre, as besides brilliant and accomplished, "a wife, a mother, a Christian," would equally apply to her. She loved her husband with a worshipful and almost idolatrous devotion, regarding him always, like an Englishman traditionally does his King, as one who can do no wrong; towards her children, her love was one continuous illumination of motherly sacrifice or willingness to sacrifice, never dimming, never waning. She was a confirmed member of the Episcopal Church, and from her religion, exemplified in many kindly acts, light and comfort came to her.

After her husband's death, in 1872, she managed the estate, and completed the education of their children; later she lived at her home, "Idlewild,"* an attractive cottage in a yard banked with flowers, at Sewanee, Tennessee, the Alma Mater of her youngest son, Quincy (q. v.), whence during each winter she would visit her children in the South; and on one of these perennial visits, March 29, 1914, at New Orleans, where her two eldest daughters resided, she fell asleep in death, and was buried beside her husband in St. John's Episcopal Cemetery, Thibodaux, Louisiana. The tombstone inscription to her is a fitting memorial:

'Pure in its purpose and strong in its strife.'"

*The cottage remains in the family, being the summer home of her son, Presley Kittredge Ewing (q. v.).

CHAPTER XVII.

THE KITTREDGE TREE: PATERNAL LINEAGE OF ELIZA
JOSEPHINE KITTREDGE, WIFE OF DR. FAYETTE
CLAY EWING.

The Kittredge family is noted for its numerous and distinguished physicians and surgeons, extending back through each generation, and particularly is this true of the family in the New England States. In James Thacher's "Medical Biography and Memoirs of Eminent Physicians Who Have Flourished in America" (published in Boston in 1823), referring to Thomas Kittredge, M. D., M. M. S. S., as "a distinguished practitioner of surgery and medicine throughout the State of Massachusetts," it is said:

"The family of which he was a member has become so distinguished for surgical skill in New England, that in many places the name alone is a passport to practice, and the number of practitioners of the name is very considerable."

Doctor Oliver Wendell Holmes' portrayal of Dr. Kittredge, in "Elsie Venner," as the leading and gifted physician in the town in which he lived, was the recognition from a high source of the name as appropriate for one illustrating the ideals of the noble profession.

The achievements of the Kittredges, however, have not been confined to medicine and surgery, but many of the family have become distinguished in other pursuits, among whom we mention a few, all descended from John Kittredge, the English emigrant who shared in the founding of Billerica, Massachusetts.

Abbott E. Kittredge, born at Roxbury, Massachusetts, July 20, 1834, was graduated from Williams College, and became a famous clergyman, being at one time president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America; he died December 17, 1912.¹

Alfred B. Kittredge, born Cheshire County, New Hampshire, March 26, 1861, was graduated from Yale; removed to Sioux Falls, and after practicing law there, and holding other important offices, was elected and served as United States Senator from South Dakota, 1901-1909; he died 1911.²

George Lyman Kittredge, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, graduated from Harvard (A. B.) and University of Chicago (LL.D.), is Professor of English at Harvard, Fellow of American Academy Arts & Sciences, and author of The Mother Tongue (with Sarah Louise Arnold), Words and Their Ways in English Speech (with late James B. Greenough), and Old Farmer and his Almanack (1905).¹

Henry Grattan Kittredge, born at Claremont, New Hampshire, January 22, 1845; son of Thomas B. Kittredge, of Keene, New Hampshire; descendant of Dr. Francis Kittredge, surgeon in the War of the Revolution (q. v.), was educated at Trinity College; married Worcester, Massachusetts, October 12, 1870, Martha S. Hodges; he was (in addition to other distinctions) a specialist in industrial journalism, a famous organizer of textile exhibits, well known as a writer and expert on textiles in the United States and England, and author of Utilization of Wastes and By-Products. He died June 5, 1909.²

Walter Kittredge, born at Merrimac, New Hampshire, October 8, 1834; son of Eri and Lucretia Kittredge, graduated from Merrimac Normal Institute; married in 1861, Annie E. Fairfield, of New Boston, New Hampshire; was after 1856 until his death, 1905, a song composer, writing words and music of many songs and giving concerts, singing his own songs, including "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," and "Scatter the Flowers Over the Gray and the Blue," besides a number of others.³

George Watson Kittredge, born North Andover, Massachusetts, December 11, 1856; son of Joseph and Henrietta Frances (Watson) Kittredge, B. S. from Massachusetts Institute Technical (1877); married Georgia Davis, of Louisville, Kentucky, October 17, 1888, is a civil engineer of rare accomplishments, and after holding other important railroad positions, has been since 1906 Chief Engineer of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, and of the Terminal Railway of Buffalo, and of the New Jersey Shore Line Railroad.⁴

Josiah Edwards Kittredge, born Boston, October 12, 1866; died December 21, 1913; son Josiah (M. D.) and Sarah Whiting (French) Kittredge, was graduated from

Yale (A. B.); married (first) Emma MacNair, of Groveland, New York (died 1898), and (second) Nettie S. Long, of Genesee, New York, December 30, 1903; he became a distinguished clergyman, filling many important positions.¹

Mabel Hyde Kittredge, born September 19, 1867, Boston; daughter Abbott Eliot and Margaret Ann (Hyde) Kittredge; is distinguished as a sociologist—the Founder and President of Practical Housekeeping Centers, New York, and the author of Housekeeping Notes (1911).²

Charmian Kittredge, daughter of Captain Willard Kittredge, who went from Maine to the West and who was Provost Marshal of Salt Lake City (1865-1866), and married her mother, a young poetess of Wisconsin, on his adventurous journey, is the great granddaughter of Dr. Kendall Kittredge, born October 19, 1773, in Billerica, Massachusetts; son of Nehemiah and Mehitable (Dutton) Kittredge; married at Billerica, February 28, 1770.³ She is now living at Glen Ellen, Sonoma County, California, and is the widow of that inimitable and universally mourned Westerner, a child of nature, Jack London, born in San Francisco, 1876, author of numerous writings with which the public is familiar, including "The Call of the Wild," and "John Barleycorn," which we instance as perhaps the best known. She, the second wife, is understood to have been very congenial with him, he often indicating their closeness in calling her "Mate-woman," and "Comrade-wife;" and she seems to have caught the vision of his life, and to have drunk of his inspiration, for she too has become famous as an author, in producing her brilliant book, "The Log of the Snark," to which every scion of the Kittredge stock may point with just pride.

was an emigrant from East Suffolk, near Lowestoft, England, sometime prior to 1660, and in that year was one of the founders of Billerica, Massachusetts. He married at Woburn, Massachusetts, on November 2, 1664, Mary Littlefield, who was the daughter of Francis Littlefield and his wife Jane Hill, of Woburn, and who was born there December 14, 1646.⁴ He died October 18, 1676,⁵ and it is said there is a tablet to his memory in Bath Cathedral, England. Children of the marriage were:

1. JOHN, born January 24, 1666.
2. James, born March 21, 1668.
3. Daniel, born July 22, 1670.
4. Jonathan, born July 16, 1674.
5. Benoni (posthumous), born May 2, 1677.

Lowestoft is a Suffolk seaport on a declivity a hundred miles northeast of London, and famous for its herring fisheries and as one of the most fashionable watering places on the west coast of England. It became noted in English history when, in 1665, the Dutch fleet under admiral Opdam was defeated by the Duke of York's fleet. It was at Lowestoft, in 1784, that John Adams, the first ambassador from the United States to England, landed. In the World War (1914-1918), Lowestoft had its historic interest much revived as the result of the unique triple attack on it from the Germans by zeppelins, cruisers and undersea craft.

DR. JOHN KITTREDGE

was the son of John Kittredge and his wife, Mary Littlefield; he was born in Billerica, January 24, 1666, and married Hannah French of Billerica before Jonathan Danforth, junior, on August 3, 1685.¹ He died at Billerica, April 27, 1714, and she died October 19, 1745.¹ Children of the marriage were:

1. John, born September 14, 1685.
2. James, born August 22, 1687.
3. Hannah, born May 4, 1689; died March 21, 1690.
4. Jacob, born February 15, 1691; died August 18, 1692.
5. Hannah, 2nd, born May, 1693.
6. Joseph, born March 31, 1695.
7. Jonathan, born January 10, 1697.
8. William, born February 11, 1699.
9. Abigail, born November 15, 1700.
10. Jane, born March 27, 1703.
11. Mirah, born February 1, 1705; died February 3, 1705.
12. FRANCIS, born October 27, 1706.¹

(q. v.). He was born October 27, 1706, at Billerica, and married there on August 1, 1736. To him and his wife Lydia, were born, at Billerica, three sons:

1. FRANCIS, born July 1, 1728.
2. Josiah, born July 25, 1730; died May, 1744.
3. Zephaniah, born May 27, 1732.¹

To them were also born at Tewksbury (which was founded in 1734, formerly a part of Billerica):

4. Lydia, born July 28, 1734, and
5. Solomon, born June 9, 1736.

The wife Lydia, died at Tewksbury, August 1, 1736.²

SOLOMON KITTREDGE, the son, born as stated, June 9, 1736, died August 24, 1792; he settled in Amherst, Massachusetts, about 1766; married Tabitha Ingalls, of Andover, Massachusetts, May 14, 1755, she dying May 8, 1794. He was a prominent man in the parish, living in the northwestern part. The children of the marriage were:

(1) Solomon, born in 1755; died in Mt. Vernon, October 22, 1845; was a Revolutionary soldier.

(2) Zephaniah, born August 24, 1757; died August 17, 1843.

(3) Tabitha, born July 28, 1758; married Benjamin Sawyer.

(4) Josiah, born July 26, 1761.

(5) Phoebe, born June 5, 1763; married Aaron Townsend.

(6) Stephen, born June 27, 1765.

(7) Lydia, born August 29, 1767; married Joshua Kittredge, November 29, 1787.

(8) Ingalls, born December 10, 1769.

(9) Betsy, born September 16, 1771; married Mr. Wheeler, and died November 9, 1865.

marriage were: 1st, Betsy, born May 18, 1782; died August 5, 1786. 2nd., Nabby, born 1790; married Jesse Smith. 3rd, Zephaniah, born September 15, 1785; died August 3, 1873; married Mary Wheeler of Hancock, who was born in August, 1788, and died February 25, 1880. 4th, Betsy, born 1788; died March 5, 1799. 5th, Nancy, born 1790; married Uriah Wilkins, and died in Stowe, Vermont, January 10, 1832, and 6th, Fanny, born 1799; died September 16, 1821.¹

was the son of Dr. Francis and Lydia Kittredge. He was born in a part of Billerica, July 1, 1728, afterwards called Tewksbury, and died in Walpole, New Hampshire, April 17, 1808. He married February 20, 1752,² Abigail Richardson of Billerica, daughter of Andrew and Hannah J. Richardson, who was born March 6, according to the town records, 1725, but according to the tombstone, 1730.² Born of this marriage were sixteen children, the youngest recorded being Melicent, born September 30, 1777.³ The children of this marriage noted in the town records of Tewksbury are:

1. Jesseniah, born March 1, 1764; died August 8, 1829; married Lydia Newton Bond.

2. STEPHEN, born January 19, 1766; married Elizabeth Eaton.

3. Rhoda, born December 19, 1767; married Amaziah Porter.

4. Achsa, born April 30, 1772; married Job Giddings.

5. Susanna, born November 29, 1773.

6. Melicent, born September 30, 1777; married (first) Earle Giddings, (second) Jason Beckwith.⁴

Other children of this marriage were Paul; Francis, married, Lucy Crosby; Molly; Elizabeth, and Abigail, married Zephaniah Kidder.⁵ Of the remaining children, there was another Achsa, born June 16, 1770, and died January 27, 1771.⁶ Three children were Amy, married, Timothy Crosby; Rachel, married Mr. Foster, and Lydia, married Mr. Mathews.⁷ The remaining child is not accounted for, probably died in infancy.

As explanatory and interesting, we quote from the Walpole Town History, published in 1880, sub nom. Kittredge, Francis, Dr., as follows:

"It is curious to note how some incident, seemingly trivial at the time, and wholly disconnected with what follows, changes the whole aspect and condition of an individual's future life. Following is a case in point. More than a hundred years ago (the precise time not known), one of the Bellows family of this town broke his leg, and as surgeons were not plenty in the vicinity, his friends were forced to the alternative of sending to Tewksbury, Massachusetts. There they found Dr. Francis Kittredge, who came to Walpole, set the bone, and stayed till his patient was out of danger. During his stay, he was persuaded to take up a lot of land and remove to Walpole. He selected the farm now owned by Charles E. Watkins, which was then an unbroken forest. He had by his wife Abigail sixteen children, several of them dying in infancy. Dr. Frank, as he was called, was a celebrated 'bone setter,' which in those days was a special gift. In connection with his son, Jesseniah, the celebrated salve, known at the time as 'Kittredge grease' was prepared, which was highly valued for its supposed healing properties. He was famous, as was also his son Jesseniah, in treatment of old sores and chronic complaints in general. How many of Dr. Frank's children were born in town, has not been ascertained nor how many lived to maturity. Their ages are not known, and consequently cannot be methodically arranged. He died April 17, 1808, aged 80 years, and she died February 15, 1812, aged 82."

DR. JESSENAH KITTREDGE, the son above noted, who died August 8, 1829, married February 28, 1793, Lydia Newton Bond, who was born March 22, 1772, died September 4, 1837, and was a daughter of Thomas Bond of North Brookfield, Massachusetts, and to them were born Lydia Kittredge, who married Francis Fisher, and the children to her by this marriage were Francis K., Horace N., and John H. Fisher. Horace N., a soldier, scholar and author of great renown, married Kiameche C. Mason, of Charlestown, Massachusetts, November 13, 1865,¹ and from this union were born Francis M., Mary L., Sarah G. and Horace C. Fisher.

There was also born to Dr. and Mrs. Jesseniah and Lydia (Bond) Kittredge a son, Thomas Bond, who was a physician and surgeon, at Keene, New Hampshire, born February 17, 1802; died December 8, 1881; married October 24, 1836, Caroline A. Smith, descendant of one of the Colonial Governors of Connecticut. A son of this marriage, Henry Grattan Kittredge, born January 22, 1841; died June 5, 1909.¹ He married Martha Sargent Hodges, October 12, 1870, and from this union were born five children, namely: Alice, Isabel, Thomas Bond, Louise, married Samuel B. Haynes, West Hartford, Connecticut, and Martha Hodges, married Clarence P. Bearce, East Providence, Rhode Island. The authors have enjoyed with the two latter an interesting correspondence, which bespeaks for them the high culture and refinement to be expected from their noble lineage.

The son, Thomas Bond, born March 20, 1878, Reading, Massachusetts, died October 14, 1918, at Providence, Rhode Island; married Emily Volk, born Hitchcock, Texas, February 16, 1889. Issue, a daughter, Arielle, born San Antonio, Texas, November 15, 1915. The widow, Mrs. Emily Volk Kittredge, whom we know, is an admirable type of fine womanhood, such as might well be selected for alliance with the Kittredge family.

Another son of the marriage of Dr. Jesseniah and Lydia Kittredge, was Jesseniah, junior, also a physician and surgeon, born in Walpole, New Hampshire, February 24, 1800; died in Waverly, Massachusetts, November 1, 1877, who married May Bellows Stone (born August 22, 1811; died February 20, 1886), in October, 1833, at Watertown, Massachusetts, her home; and of him, Thomas Bellows Peck, in his work, The Bellows Genealogy, at page 478, observes:

"Dr. Kittredge belonged to a well known and highly respected family of physicians, and was the fifth in direct line to follow that profession. He was in the sixth generation from John Kittredge, the emigrant ancestor, who came to this country from Oulton, or Lowestoft, Suffolk County, England, and was one of the original settlers, in 1660, of Billerica, Massachusetts, living in that part of the town which was afterwards set off as Tewksbury. The line of descent was through Dr. Jesseniah and Lydia (Bond) Kittredge, of Walpole; Dr. Francis and Abigail (Richardson) Kittredge, of Tewksbury and Walpole; Dr. Francis and Lydia Kittredge, of Tewksbury; Dr. John and Hannah (French) Kittredge, of Tewksbury, to John Kittredge, the immigrant, and his wife, Mary Littlefield, from whom all of the name of Kittredge in this country are believed to be descended. Dr. Kittredge's mother, Lydia Bond, who was born March 22, 1772, and died September 4, 1837, was daughter of Thomas Bond, of Brookfield, Massachusetts, and was in the fifth generation from William Bond, of Watertown, the ancestor of most of the families of Bond in New England. His grandfather, Dr. Francis Kittredge, removed from Tewksbury to Walpole about 1790,* and built and lived in the large Colonial house about two miles and a half southeast of the village on what is still sometimes called 'Kittredge Hill.' "

FRANCIS, son of Dr. Francis and Abigail Kittredge, who himself became a physician and surgeon, was a soldier for Independence of the Revolutionary War, born at Tewksbury, Massachusetts, July 2, 1758, and served three months, in 1776, private in Capt. Edward Farmer's Company, Col. Jacob Gerrish's Regiment, February 20 to May 20, and for six months, 1776, private in Capt. Samuel Tay's Company, Col. Jonathan Reed, and for three months, 1777 or 1778, in Capt. Edward Farmer's Company, Col. Jonathan Reed, and for two months, 1779, surgeon's mate in Capt. Nathaniel West's Company on ship "Black Prince," serving in the Regiment of Guards at Bunker Hill, and engaging in the Penobscot Expedition, and perhaps performing other services.¹ He died at Tewksbury, Massachusetts, on November 9, 1837. He was married August 26, 1782, to Lucy Crosby, of Amherst, Massachusetts, who died September 4, 1803. Their children were Francis, born January 26, 1783; Paul, born August 26, 1784; Lucy, born September 17, 1786; Lydia, born August 21, 1788; Susanna, born September 8, 1790; Joel, born March 30, 1793, died August 8, 1793, and Joel Crosby, born July 31, 1794, died September 7, 1832.² The son Paul Kittredge, who was also a physician and surgeon, was born as stated, August 26, 1784, and died August 10, 1845; he married January 17, 1808, Rebecca Martin, of Wetherfield, Vermont, by whom he had fourteen children, four of them being physicians.² Under this line, Mrs. Estelle S. (Kittredge) Perham, wife of Walter Perham, of Chelmsford, Massachusetts, has been accepted as a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Number 22736, she being a daughter of Cullen Fordyce and Amy (Hull) Kittredge, and her father a son of Dr. Paul and Rebecca (Martin) Kittredge, thereby making her a great granddaughter of the Revolutionary soldier, Dr. Francis Kittredge, and his wife, Lucy Crosby.¹

The subject of this division, Dr. Francis Kittredge, was surgeon for the side of the patriots in the War of the Revolution, for which see—

Under this service by him as hospital surgeon, Mrs. Martha Hodges (Kittredge) Bearce has been accepted as a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Number 101542, besides quite a number of other descendants, some of whom are elsewhere mentioned in that connection.

ABIGAIL (RICHARDSON) KITTREDGE

wife of Dr. Francis Kittredge, was born at Billerica, Massachusetts, March 6, according to the town records, 1725, but according to the inscription on her tombstone 1730, and died February 15, 1812, at Walpole, New Hampshire. She was married February 20, 1752, at or near Billerica, and had sixteen children. She was the daughter of Andrew and Hannah (Jefts) Richardson, her mother being the daughter of Henry Jefts.²

The Richardsons were one of the earliest and most noted of the New England families.

ANDREW RICHARDSON, father of Abigail, was one of three brothers, the other two being Thomas and Jonathan, and these are the three brothers mentioned in history as having gone in a company of thirty-six soldiers under Capt. John Lane to Dunstable and Groton as a "relief," July 4, 1706. He (Andrew) was born in Billerica, Massachusetts, June 16, 1678; married by Joseph Williams, a judicial officer, to Hannah Jefts, December 9, 1707; she died October 31, 1749, and he on December 23, 1752, in Billerica; he left a will dated December 10, 1750, probated January 15, 1753; he lived and died on a farm in the easterly part of Billerica, which his father gave him by will dated October 14, 1705. Children of this marriage were: 1. Andrew, born January 18, 1709, married Elizabeth Winn of Billerica, December 25, 1733, having one child, Andrew. 2. Hannah, born July 7, 1712; married Benjamin Kidder. 3. Phoebe, born March 4, 1716; married Mr. Marshall, having children, Isaac, Phoebe and Samuel. 4. Elizabeth, born December 9, 1719, married John Blanchard. 5. Mary, born May 26, 1722, married Joseph Danforth. 6. ABIGAIL, born March 6, 1725.¹

THOMAS RICHARDSON, the father of Andrew and grandfather of Abigail above mentioned, was born in Woburn, Massachusetts, October 1645, married Mary Stimpson.²

THOMAS AND MARY RICHARDSON were the father and mother of Thomas and great grandparents of Abigail Richardson. This grand-parent, Thomas, who died in Woburn, August 28, 1651, was the youngest of three brothers, Ezekiel, Samuel and Thomas, who in co-operation with others were the founders of Woburn, and the formation therein, in 1641, of a church. Ezekiel, the eldest brother, came from England in the fleet with Winthrop, in 1630, by the 6th of July, when fifteen ships of that fleet had arrived. It is supposed that the two younger brothers, Samuel and Thomas, arrived as much as five years later. This is indicated by the fact that their names did not appear in a list of the inhabitants of Charleston, dated January 9, 1633, and the first notice of either is when Mary, the wife of Thomas, joined the Church, February 21, 1635. Later, in 1637, both Samuel and Thomas united with the church and received the grant of a house plot, and were admitted as freemen of the Colony and made citizens. The children of this marriage of the immigrant Thomas with Mary, which probably occurred on the eve of their departure from England, were: 1. Mary, born at Charleston, baptized November 17, 1638; married John Baldwin. 2. Isaac, born May, 1643; married Deborah Fuller. 3. THOMAS, born October, 1645; married Mary Stimpson. 4. Ruth, born April, 1647. 5. Phoebe, born January, 1648. 6. Nathaniel, born January, 1650; married Mary, whose surname seems to have been lost in the charm of the first. These last five were born in Billerica. Ruth or Phoebe, the records leave it uncertain which, married Lieutenant Thomas Fuller, of England, ancestor of many of the Fullers of New England.

DR. STEPHEN KITTREDGE

was the son of Francis Kittredge and his wife, Abigail Richardson, and was born at Tewksbury, Massachusetts, January 19, 1766, and died at Walpole, New Hampshire, July 25, 1800; he married Elizabeth Eaton in Walpole, New Hampshire, on June 16, 1791, the Rev. Thomas Fessenden officiating.¹

The children of this marriage were:

1. Stephen, became a physician and surgeon, went to Cincinnati, and died early.
2. Roswell, born May 8, 1793, also a physician and surgeon, who went West and died young.
3. Susan (Suky), born December 5, 1795.
4. EBENEZER EATON, born February 3, 1799.²

The probate records of Cheshire County, at Keene, New Hampshire, show that the widow, Elizabeth Eaton Kittredge, qualified as administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband, Stephen Kittredge, August 13, 1800, and that she afterwards (some time prior to June 18, 1807) married Amos Garnsey, of Westminster, Vermont, which is directly across the Connecticut River from Walpole.³

From the record of deeds of that county, it appears that he (Amos Garnsey) was guardian of the minor children, Stephen Roswell, Suky and Ebenezer Eaton, conveying as such land of theirs on October 29, 1806,⁴ for a consideration of $942, and that he resigned as guardian on May 13, 1807.⁵

wife of Dr. Stephen Kittredge, was born in 1769, probably at Hampton Falls or Candia, New Hampshire, and died in the West in 1853; she was married, as stated, (first) to Dr. Stephen Kittredge, June 16, 1791, and (second) to Amos Garnsey. Her parents were Ebenezer Eaton and his wife, Anne Brown, who were married at Kensington, New Hampshire, by the Rev. Jeremiah Fogg, on June 9, 1762.⁶

EBENEZER EATON, the father, was born at Hampton Falls, April 10, 1735, son of John and Hannah (Fowler) Eaton, and died at Walpole, New Hampshire, August 27, 1805. He married (first) Anne Brown as above stated, and (second) Comfort Emerson, in Walpole, New Hampshire, November 10, 1793.¹ Children by his marriage with Anne Brown were: Eliphailit, eldest son, married about 1792, Elizabeth being his wife's first name; ELIZABETH, born 1769; Josiah, married Zeruah Robinson, in Walpole, New Hampshire, April 23, 1809; Abigail, dates not known; Calvin, born 1786; died March 4, 1809.² There were probably other children.

The father, Ebenezer Eaton, was a Revolutionary soldier, ranking corporal, in the cause of Independence; he was a corporal in Capt. Joshua Bailey's Company, Col. Thomas Stickney's Regiment, General Stark's Brigade of New Hampshire Militia, which marched from Hopkinton, July, 1777, and joined the Northern Continental Army, and he participated in the engagement in which the company took part on July 22, of that year.³ He probably otherwise served in the great struggle for freedom. His removal to Cheshire County, New Hampshire, in or near Walpole, was probably after the close of the Revolutionary war, as indicated by the records of family events.

ANNE BROWN, the first wife of Ebenezer Eaton, and mother of Elizabeth Eaton, was born at Kensington, New Hampshire, March 15, 1743; died in or near Walpole, New Hampshire, between 1786 (the year of her youngest child's birth) and 1793 (the year of her surviving husband's second marriage). Her lineage comes through many prominent families of New England; she was the daughter of Nehemiah Brown and Anne Longfellow, who were married January 26, 1738, at Kensington, New Hampshire. Anne Longfellow, born August 2, 1719, was the daughter of Nathan Longfellow and his wife, Mary Green, who were married May 28, 1713. Mary Green, born April 15, 1701, at Hampton, New Hampshire, was the daughter of John Green and his wife, Abiel Marston, who were married December 23, 1695. Abiel Marston, born April 12, 1677, at Hampton, New Hampshire, was the daughter of Ephraim Marston (born December 2, 1654, son of Thomas Marston), and his wife, Abiel Sanborn, who were married February 3, 1666. Abiel Sanborn was the daughter of Jabez Sanborn and Abiah Masten, who married December 29, 1716, groom nineteen years and bride fourteen years of age.*

Other children born to Nathan and Mary (Green) Longfellow were: Jonathan, born May 23, 1714; Samuel, born May 8, 1716; Jacob, born July 20, 1722; Sewall, born October 6, 1724; Abigail, born February 5, 1726; Nathan, born June 8, 1729, and Green, born April 5, 1731.

Other children born to John and Abiel (Marston) Green were: Jeremiah, born November 26, 1697; Abraham, born August 28, 1707; John, born March 1, 1710; Phoebe, born June 19, 1715; Anna, born May 18, 1718.

Other children born to Ephraim and Abiel (Sanborn) Marston were: John, born February 11, 1680; Thomas, born July 14, 1687; Jeremiah, born November 5, 1691, and Ephraim, born July 14, 1687.¹

*We have conformed the early dates to the present reckoning of time, instead of commencing the year at March 25, as was in some instances done before 1752.

DR. EBENEZER EATON KITTREDGE

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE KITTREDGE TREE CONTINUED: DR. EBENEZER EATON, HIS CAREER, MARRIAGE AND DESCENDANTS.

the son of Stephen Kittredge and his wife, Elizabeth Eaton, was born in Walpole, New Hampshire, February 3, 1799; was qualified to practice in medicine and surgery, then went to Mississippi, going on a flat boat from Cincinnati down the Mississippi river; he settled in Jefferson County in that State, and shortly afterwards obtained his medical degree and diploma as physician and surgeon. He was professionally called by Mrs. Elizabeth Green, widow of Everard Green, to "Gayosa," their family home, and there met the daughter, Martha Wills Green, whom he soon after married, October 5, 1820, the marriage license being issued October 3, 1820.¹

We pause here for a bit of romance: It is a tradition in the family, well recognized, that the mother of Martha Wills Green (Mrs. Elizabeth Kirkland Green) first saw Dr. Kittredge at Washington, in Jefferson County, Mississippi, where he had located, and was so impressed with his appearance, that she inquired who he was. The answer came: "A young Yankee doctor who has just hung out his shingle." To which she replied: "Well, I like his looks, like the way he moves; he is smart, I see that." Not long after, when a doctor was needed in her home, she sent for him; then followed his courtship of Martha Wills, at that time a slip of a girl, and later his proposal of marriage to her. The marriage was opposed pretty generally by her relatives, probably because of the prejudice among the aristocratic families of the South in its early days against matrimonial alliances with new arrivals from families of the North. The mother, however, was very friendly to the marriage, discerning, no doubt, the merit and strong character, and foreseeing the success, of the expectant groom. The climax of her argument was, "If he ever gets drowned, there will be no use looking for him down stream"—meaning, of course, that he would never "go with the current."

pioneer in that section, where he acquired what afterwards became one of the most magnificent sugar plantations in the State, which he called "Elm Hall," and where he constructed a mansion home that remained the residence of the family during his life and until long after his death. He was one of the wealthiest of the Louisiana planters, eminent in his profession, and honored and esteemed by all.

His elegant home was the center of education, culture, and refinement. When Dr. Kittredge and his gifted son, Joseph Kirkland, were surrounded by the former's brilliant sons-in-law, Fayette Clay Ewing, George Wesley Race, George W. Jones, Joseph B. Whittington and Robert N. Sims, all scholars and wits, there was an assembly of men, flashing out fires of intellect, rarely witnessed in any home—all possessed of grace and charm of manner, handsome and commanding in appearance, and gifted with a fluency and resource of conversation at once attractive, interesting and ornate.

Dr. Kittredge (E. E.) died October 19, 1867, at his summer home, Winchester Springs, Tennessee, lamented by numerous relatives and friends, especially in the East, and South.

MARTHA WILLS GREEN

(wife of Dr. Ebenezer Eaton Kittredge) was born at "Gayosa" December 1, 1804; died November 18, 1836, at "Elm Hall." She is buried in the family vault at Napoleonville, Louisiana, in the cemetery of the Episcopal Church which was built by her husband, and the Rector of which at this writing is her grandson, the Rev. Quincy Ewing. She was a very beautiful woman, of patrician cast, as may readily be seen from her accompanying picture.

Issue of Dr. Kittredge's marriage with Martha Wills Green, his first wife:

1. Elizabeth Eaton, born March 9, 1822, in Jefferson County, Mississippi; died August 31, 1847, at "Elm Hall," Assumption Parish, Louisiana. She married Edmund Parsons Dwight, a lawyer then practicing in New Orleans, Louisiana. No issue survived her.

2. Mary Louise, born October 11, 1825, in Jefferson County, Mississippi; died at "Glenwood," Assumption Parish, Louisiana, February 3, 1887. She was much beloved for her kind acts and broad sympathies by all who knew her, and her funeral, preceded at her special request by a band of music, was generally attended by the people of that section regardless of race or creed. It was indeed a day of universal mourning. She was married on April 3, 1844, by the Rt. Rev. Leonidas Polk, to George Washington Jones (son of John and Marion Jones,) born June 5, 1817, in Ohio; died at "Glenwood," Assumption Parish, Louisiana, March 25, 1889; he was one of the most highly esteemed sugar planters of that part of the State. Issue of their marriage:

(1) Cora Wills, who was a brilliant belle of New Orleans society, was born February 6, 1845; died in Chicago, Illinois, October, 1899; married at "Glenwood" January 25, 1872, to Walter F. Moring, born Amelia Courthouse, Virginia, 1842; died Chicago, Illinois, June 25, 1886. Issue: 1st. George Race*, born January 24, 1873; married June 21, 1898, in Chicago, Illinois, Fanny Pendleton Whitten, born December 12, 1876, in Covington, Kentucky; died June 11, 1914, in New York City. Children: George P., born in Chicago, Illinois, April 8, 1899, and Dorothy, born in Chicago, August 5, 1900. 2nd. Cora Martha, born in Chicago, January 27, 1879, married in Napoleonville, Louisiana, November 21, 1900, Walter Irving Barton, born in Louisiana in about the year 1863; died December 23, 1906, in Ascension Parish, Louisiana. Children: Walter Irving, born August 23, 1901, and Cora Moring, born July 31, 1906, both in Ascension Parish, Louisiana.

(2) Stephen, died when five years old.

(3) Elizabeth Clarendon, born December 16, 1848; married (first) April 3, 1869, William Sims, a Captain in the C. S. A., and later a prominent lawyer of Napoleonville, Louisiana, born in 1838; died at "Glenwood," September 8, 1876, and (second) she married on June 2, 1897, at Gonzales, Texas, Edward Pugh Munson, born September 16, 1853; died June 25, 1911, at "Glenwood." She is a lady of rare scholarly attainments, of imposing appearance and charming personality, and was on December 13, 1916, accepted as a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Number 126582, with two bars, ancestors Francis Kittredge, surgeon, and Col. Thomas M. Green (q. v.), but entitled to a third bar, ancestor Corporal Ebenezer Eaton (q. v.). No issue by her second marriage; by the first the following: 1st. Mary *Italics are sometimes used for ready reference to great grandchildren.

Louise (Loulie), born February 21, 1870; married in Houston, Texas, December 31, 1888, George Burgess, of Gonzales, Texas, born in Wharton County, Texas, September 21, 1861, and a member of the United States House of Representatives for sixteen consecutive years. 2nd. George William, a physician and surgeon, born December 26, 1871; died September 16, 1915; married January 1, 1906, his cousin, Olivia Amanda Kittredge. No issue. Dr. Sims was a self made man, and by his own efforts succeeded in educating himself, being graduated from the Gross Medical College, of the Rocky Mountain University, at Denver, Colorado, Class of 1897; he practiced his profession for a short time at Denver, then moved to Texas, practiced at Kerrville; was assistant surgeon in the war with Spain (1898), of Third Texas Infantry, serving at Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas, at Fort Clark, Texas, and at Fort McIntosh, Laredo, Texas; was special examiner, appointed by the War Department, in mustering out the Third Infantry (1899); was appointed, on recommendation of United States Army officers, Contract Surgeon (1899), and ordered to the Phillipines, whither he went on the transport Morgan City, having a journey of great peril and narrow escape. In 1906, after the marriage noted, he took a post-graduate course at the Polyclinic Department of the Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana, then removed to Texas, and practiced at Karnes City and Falls City until 1910, when he went to San Antonio, and there practiced until his death. He was a close student of "Anaesthesia," and wrote an exhaustive work on "Psycho-Dynamics;" he was, shortly before his death, nominated by the People's Municipal League, of San Antonio, Texas, for Commissioner of Sanitation and Parks and Public Property, but after an exciting race was defeated.

3RD. WILLIAM NICHOLS, born March 10, 1873; died July 10, 1885.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE GREEN TREE: MATERNAL LINEAGE OF ELIZA JOSEPHINE KITTRIDGE, WIFE OF DR. FAYETTE CLAY EWING.

This was one of the most renowned of the aristocratic Southern families; it was of English descent, hailed from Virginia, and settled in Mississippi, where the different branches of the family owned and occupied extensive and wealthy estates, the seats of their luxurious homes, which were the centers of elegance, culture and refinement of that high type distinctive of the first families of the old South, and which have perhaps, tout ensemble, never been excelled in the annals of time.

The family originated in America with and his wife Martha, who came from England, their birthplace, to Virginia at an early period of its history, bringing with them two daughters, one of whom married Blocksom and the other Eaton. During the voyage a son was born to them, Thomas, nicknamed "The Seagull" because of his birth on the ocean.

THOMAS GREEN II

called "The Seagull," son of Thomas and Martha Green (q. v.), is said to have been a sea merchant; he married Martha Filmer, daughter of Major Henry Filmer, a British officer, whose wife's name was Elizabeth, both born in England.

This Henry Filmer, the father of Martha (Filmer) Green, was a member of the House of Burgesses from James City County, Virginia, in the year 1642-1643.¹

Children of the marriage of Thomas and Martha (Filmer) Green:

1. John, wife's name Elizabeth. Children: (1) Thomas, who moved to South Carolina, married and left issue, and (2) Elizabeth, who married Payne and left issue:

2. THOMAS (q. v.)

3. Elizabeth, married John Crawley, left issue.

*We are largely indebted for the pedigree of the Green line to the Filson Club Publications, No. 14, by Hon. Z. F. Smith and Mrs. Mary Rogers Clay. Members of the Club, same published in Louisville, Ky., in 1899, John P. Morton & Co., Printers.

¹Hening's Statutes, Vol. 1, p. 239; Stanard's Colonial Virginia Register, p. 63.

4. Rebecca, married (first) Condon. Issue: daughter, Mary, married William Booker, of Amelia County, Virginia. She married (second) Marston. Issue: William, Elizabeth, Thomas and John.

5. Mary, married (first) James Wilkerson. Issue: Priscilla and Sarah. She married (second) Thomas Walker. Issue: Thomas and Elizabeth.

6. Abram, of Amelia County, Virginia, was a colonel. He married and left issue: (1) Sally, married Terry Keen; (2) Abram, married and left issue; (3) Susanna, married Vodkin; (4) William, married Miss Archer and left issue; and (5) Obedience, married William Green.

7. Filmer, married Mary Walker. Children: Elizabeth, Ann, Mary, Filmer, Edmund and Susanna.

8. William, married Amy Clay. Children: Thomas, Patty (married William Williamson), Filmer, William, John, and Amy (married Edward Moseley, of Roanoke, Virginia.).

9. Hannah, married James Turner. Children: Two sons who died young.

THOMAS GREEN III

son of Thomas and Martha (Filmer) Green (q. v.), was born 1665; he was engaged in mercantile enterprises in James City County, Virginia, during the earlier part of the eighteenth century, dying in the year 1730; he married about 1712, Elizabeth Marston, born November 25, 1692; died August 11, 1759, having survived her husband twenty-nine years; her will, dated November 12, 1758, was probated January 24, 1760; she was the daughter, the eldest child, of Thomas and Elizabeth (Marvel) Marston.

Children of Thomas and Elizabeth (Marston) Green:

1. A daughter, who married Thomas Coles or Cowles. Issue: A son, Thomas.

2. Elizabeth, married (first) Dawson. Born from the union a son, Samuel. She married (second) Leonard Cheatam. Issue: Leonard, Abbey, Edward and James, besides several daughters.

3. William, died without issue.

4. Lucy, born 1717; married Henry Clay, 1735.

5. Martha (Patsy), born 1719; married Charles Clay, 1741.

6. THOMAS MARSTON GREEN (q. v.).

7. Rebecca, married Francis Jones, removed to South Carolina.

8. Marston, of Amelia County, Virginia, father of Grief Green, a very prominent lawyer.

General Green Clay, of Kentucky, was a son of one of the marriages noted; he became conspicuous in the early history of that State; he was a gallant officer of the Continental Army, and a cousin of Honorable Henry Clay of Kentucky; he was the father of two sons, Brutus Junius and Cassius Marcellus, the latter of whom was from early manhood a pronounced adherent to the Abolition cause, and during President Lincoln's Administration represented the United States at the Court of Russia.

THOMAS MARSTON GREEN*

son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Marston) Green (q. v.), was born in James City County, Virginia, November 19, 1723; died in Jefferson County, Mississippi, 1805; married November 21, 1752, Martha Wills, born March 31, 1734; died 1783-5, in New Orleans, Louisiana; she was the eldest daughter of Filmer Wills and his wife, Ann Harwood.

Major William Harwood, the father of Ann Harwood, was a member of the House of Burgesses from Warwick County, Virginia, year 1714,¹ and for many years Justice of the same County; he died June 2, 1737.²

Children of Thomas Marston and Martha (Wills) Green:

1. Elizabeth, born October 21, 1753; died in infancy.
2. Henry Filmer, born November 11, 1755; died young; no issue.
3. Thomas Marston, junior, born February 6, 1758, in James City County, Virginia; died 1812, in Jefferson County, Mississippi; was Representative of the Mississippi Territory in the Seventh Congress of the United States (1802-1803); he married Martha Kirkland, February 15, 1780, who died November 15, 1805. Children (all born in Jefferson County, Mississippi):

(1) Joseph Kirkland, born November 16, 1780; married about 1803, Mildred Meriwether Cabell.³ Their issue:

*The middle name appears to have been mostly dropped in historic references to him, the usual designation being "Col. Thomas Green."

³For continuation of this line, see "The Cabells and Their Kin," pp. 306 et seq.

1st. Martha Augusta, born January 31, 1806; died October 10, 1864; married January 8, 1829, Joseph Eggleston Jones, born January 2, 1793, died April 17, 1852. Children: Joseph Cabell, Thomas Henry, Eugene D., Samuel Cabell, Sarah V., Archelaus Kirkland, Wm. Syme, Meriwether Lewis, James Railey, Lucy A., and Meredith Dabney. 2nd. Samuel Cabell, married 1832, his cousin Augusta Kirkland, daughter of Archelaus and Jane (Green) Kirkland, latter sister of Joseph Kirkland (supra); no issue. 3rd. Lucy Ann Green. 4th. Sarah Virginia, married Ammon Hancock, of Lynchburg, Virginia. 5th. Thomas Marston, died young; no issue.

(2) Elizabeth, born January 18, 1783; died November 15, 1805; married John Davidson. Issue: 1st, Thomas Green, married Miss George, of Louisiana; had children. 2nd. Martha Leminda, married Owen Dorsey; two children, Holmes and Martha; former married Jane West, and afterwards, Mrs. Bowman, of Louisiana; and latter, C. H. Forman, both having children. 3rd. John, married twice, supposed to have descendants in Texas. 4th. Filmer William, and 5th. Mary Eliza, both of whom probably died before maturity.

(3) Mary (Polly,*), married Charles B. Howell. Children: 1st. Rebecca, married Thomas Jefferson Green, son of Abram, brother of Thomas M. Green (the Congressman), who was her first cousin once removed, and had children; 2nd. Kezia, married Stephen Forman. Children: C. H. Forman (married Martha Dorsey, his second cousin as above stated); Richard; Mary, married Reed; Patsy (married Thomas West, her cousin), and Stephen.

(4) Martha Wills,* married John Hopkins; a daughter, Mary Jane, married Armistead Bradford, of Tennessee. Children: Thomas, who went to Texas, and Martha, who married Robert (Bob) Foster, of Nashville, Tennessee. Thomas, a descendant of this branch, married Susanna Bissland, and had two children, Thomas and Alexander, but the information we have obtained leaves it uncertain whether he was of the marriage of John Hopkins or of Armistead Bradford, probably the son above mentioned of Armistead Bradford.

(5) Jane Green, married Archelaus Kirkland; a daugh-

*A conflict appears in the documents before us as to which of the sisters, Martha and Mary (Polly), married Howell and which Hopkins, but the text seems best supported, and we suggest that in the final analysis, at this late day, the wives being sisters of the whole blood, the only difference is in a name.

ter Augusta, the only child who became of age, married (first) Samuel Cabell Green, and (second) Blanton Ellis, by whom she had two children, B. Smith and Helen Augusta.

(6) Leminda, born July 5, 1761; died January 29, 1819; married Major Thomas Hinds,* hero of the war of 1812, ancestor of Captain Thomas Hinds of the Confederate army.

Major Thomas Hinds, born in Burkley County, Virginia, January 19, 1780; died Jefferson County, Mississippi, August 23, 1840; had an illustrious career. In 1806 he organized for defense of Mississippi a company of dragoons, his first known act of public service; later, at the battle of New Orleans (war 1812) he covered himself with immortal fame by his marvelously brave attacks on the British while leading as Major his Mississippi cavalry company, so much so that his company, with personal mention of him, was made the subject of a laudatory order issued by Major General Andrew Jackson, there in command, on January 21, 1815. Major Hinds (referred to as General Hinds) was defeated by George Poindexter for Governor of Mississippi in 1819, but the next year (1820) he and General Jackson were appointed commissioners to negotiate a purchase from the Choctaw Indians of a part of their territory, and in 1821 Hinds County was named for him, and in the same year, he with Lieutenant Governor James Patton and Dr. William Lattimore, were appointed by the Mississippi Legislature as commissioners to select a proper site for the seat of government, which they did, choosing the present city of Jackson, naming it for General Jackson. As further recognition of Major Hinds' popularity and influence, it may be noted that he was elected to Congress in 1827.

Children of Thomas and Leminda (Green) Hinds: John, died in infancy, and Howell, married (first) Drusilla Cocks, born September 1, 1809, in Jefferson County, Mississippi; died April 9, 1841. Issue: Thomas, born December 23, 1830; died in Greenville, Mississippi; Wilkin, born August 3, 1833, and Leminda, born April 29, 1835. He (Howell Hinds) married (second) Mrs. Mary Ann (Coleman) Lape. Issue: Alice, John and Howell, first named dying when about twelve years old, and the other two, after their father's death (which was in Greenville, Mississippi, May 13, 1868), going with their mother to Missouri.

*The histories pretty generally refer to him as General Thomas Hinds, but as he was Major in the war of 1812, and died before the Mexican war of 1848, we prefer to ascribe to him the title of Major.

(7) Rebecca, born August 19, 1793; married Dr. Thomas McCoy. Children: Mary, married Kavanaugh, and Leminda, married Woldrich, of Hinds County, Mississippi.

(8) William Marston, born January 10, 1796; married Laura McCaleb; he died 1829; no issue.

(9) Filmer Wills, born May 25, 1798; married Emily H. McCaleb. Children: 1st. William H., no issue; 2nd. Laura Leminda, married Robert Cox. Issue: William, Drusilla, Emily, Laura, Ernestine, Holmes, and Evie McCoy, who married John Cox Inge, of Meridian, Mississippi.

(10) Augusta, born July 19, 1801; married J. Remsen Holmes, about 1819. Children: 1st. William Remsen, born November 22, 1820; 2nd. Filmer Wills, born October 5, 1822, died in infancy; 3rd. Joseph Forman, born July 24, 1824; 4th. Thomas Marston, born April 10, 1826, died young. William Remsen Holmes above named, married June 22, 1841, Anna Maria Cox, born November 15, 1820. Children: Howell Hinds, born January 2, 1843, Joseph R., born July 26, 1844, Martha Augusta, born March 4, 1846; William M., born February 27, 1849; Robert, born January 28, 1851; Alice Anna, born December 10, 1852; Josephine, born November 12, 1854; Aline, born April 27, 1856, and Remsen, born December 26, 1857.

5. Abner Green, born January 21, 1762; died February 21, 1816; married November 1, 1784, Mary Hutchins, born February 4, 1768; died February 4, 1825, daughter of Col. Anthony Pintard Hutchins, a British officer who was retired before the Revolutionary war, and of his wife, Ann White. Issue:

(1) Thomas H., born January 23, 1787; no issue.

(2) James, born January 24, 1789; married Mary Metcalf; his portrait now hangs in the library of his nephew, Professor William W. Carson, of the University of Tennessee, at Knoxville.

(3) Mary A. M., born January 24, 1791; married April 17, 1807, General Cowles Meade, who was secretary and also Acting Governor of Mississippi Territory. Issue: 1st. Cowles, married Sallie Wolfolk, daughter of Joseph Harris and Martha (Mitchell) Wolfolk, of Woodford County, Virginia. Children: Emma and Ada, latter married David Saffrans of Mississippi. Issue: Meade, Malvina and Ada. 2nd. Martha, born October 14, 1826; married Samuel Fisher, 1840. Child: Mary, married Thomas White.

(4) Eliza Celeste, born November 26, 1792; married (first) Joseph Bowmar, (second) David Wood; daughter by first marriage, Mary Caroline, and by second marriage, Eliza. Latter married William Conner, who was First Lieutenant of the famous troop of cavalry from Natchez, commanded by Col. (afterwards General) W. T. Martin, and who later, after becoming Captain, was promoted to Colonel, and gallantly gave up his life as Gettysburg; they left a number of children. The daughter, Mary Caroline, born June 5, 1814, married Dr. Charles Abercrombie, son of Rev. James Abercrombie, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Children, among others who died without known issue, were: 1st. Eliza C., married J. J. Whoon, July 9, 1867; had children. 2nd. John, of Florida, married and had a large family. 3rd. Mary Josephine, born April 14, 1841; married August 2, 1865, Clifford Stanley Sims, born February 17, 1839, son of John and Emeline M. (9) Abram Ashbury, born April 3, 1819. (10) Eliza, born August 1, 1821.

Abram Ashbury, a cultured gentleman and profound scholar, only recently died at Greenville, Mississippi, running a century close; he was the father of Mrs. Lucy Yerger, wife of the late Col. William Yerger of that city, and grandfather of the wife of Ben Humphreys, now one of the leading Congressmen from Mississippi, being a member of the United States House of Representatives.

12. EVERARD (q. v.).

Thomas Marston Green, senior, husband of Martha Wills, is a conspicuous figure in the Green line; contemporaneous history described him as a "bold, persistent and determined man," and we may safely assert that he was brave in war, daring in exploitation, and resourceful in peace. He was a soldier of the War of the Revolution in the cause of Independence, and his rank therein has been established as that of Colonel.¹

*He was from Maine, and was a scholarly and cultured gentleman, but as far as known not related to the Greens of his wife's family.

(4) Antonio Mayson, born September 11, 1845; died unmarried.

(5) Lucy Estelle, born April 18, 1848; married William M. Bracey. Issue: 1st. Maggie Louise, born November 26, 1877; married May 3, 1898, Joseph Wyatt Grantham. Children: Joseph Wyatt, born February 19, 1899; William Bracey, born December 8, 1900; Lucy Green, born December 25, 1903, died in 1910; Malcolm Steven, born January 28, 1909; Robert Gordon, born July 29, 1912; Francis Willard, born January 17, 1916. 2nd. Albert Green, born August 26, 1879, and has died. 3rd. Fanny Augusta, born January 22, 1882, married September 24, 1903, at Terry, Mississippi, William David Terry, born November 25, 1882, now residing in San Antonio, Texas. Issue, a son Robert, born July 6, 1904.

4. Abner Everard, who measured up to the standard of his proud family, married Sarah Jane Wood, daughter of Ethan Allen and Nancy (Collins) Wood, of Mississippi. Ethan Allen Wood was a big man every way, honored and honorable. Issue of the marriage of Abner Everard and Sarah (Wood) Green were three sons and three daughters, as follows:

(1) James Payne, a very cultivated and highly educated gentleman, who has long been prominent and influential in his section in public affairs; he was graduated as a lawyer, and taught school at one time in Port Gibson, Mississippi; married Felicia Anna Wailes, daughter of Colonel B. L. Covington Wailes, State Geologist, author of "Mississippi Geology," a rare work and still a standard. They had three sons and two daughters, all of whom died before maturity except the son, Abner Everard, who grew to manhood, was graduated from the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tennessee, as a civil engineer, and later became a licensed lawyer of both the common and civil law. At the time of his death, in his young manhood, he was district attorney of Tensas Parish, Louisiana.

(2) Robert A., died October 15, 1917; he married Magda Turpin, of New Orleans, Louisiana, who pre-deceased him; no issue.

(3) William Kirkland, born October 29, 1849; married April 29, 1885, Alice Smith, born March 12, 1866; he died April 23, 1913. Issue of the marriage, a daughter, Leila Lake, born May 9, 1886, who married October 9, 1907, Grant Green Alexander, of Greenville, Mississippi, born September 12, 1882. They have one child, Alice Lake, born August 27, 1908.

(4) Fannie Adele, the eldest daughter, now living in New Orleans, Louisiana, married Dr. Robert Payne, who is dead; no issue living.

(5) Irene, married H. Otey Railey, a cousin on the Green side, both dead; they had a promising son, Frank, who grew to manhood, and died in New Orleans, Louisiana.

(6) Leila C., never married, and is now living at "Gayosa," the old homestead, with her brother, James Payne, and his wife, Anna (Wailes) Green.

Though all are old, each past "three score years and ten," and bereft of the dear ones gone before, they are yet young in thought and feeling, awake with alertness to events of interest; and, sustained by the "blessed hope of immortality," they are patiently waiting to answer the final summons when it comes, "like one that wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Everard Green, the head of this division, was a princely man, and if we were asked what of his personal history, what of his life and career, we would answer, that of a wealthy Southern planter in the ante-bellum days, supervising imperiously his lordly estate, and enjoying luxurious, but remarkably cultivated and refined, association with his equally high-born and grandly endowed neighbors who were possessed of similar estates. Thus, in this gladsome way, days would glide into weeks, and the weeks into months and years, passing as swiftly and sweetly as tho wafted along on the zephyr-laden notes of an Aeolian harp. Yet, pausing a moment, may we indulge the reflection that, deeply impressed as we are with the exaltation of service dedicated to help of those engaged in moving the great engine of the world's progress, we have no regret for the departure of those halcyon times, grand as they were, when contemplated from the dazzling splendor of their dizzy heights. The burial of them, tho in tears and blood, has resulted, as we think, in a resurrection where may be seen glimpses of the radiance of a "New South" approaching more nearly the equality of opportunity and the brotherhood of man.

For a continuation of the Green line under Everard Green's daughter, Martha Wills, who became the wife of Dr. Ebenezer Eaton Kittredge (q. v.), see the Kittredge tree, supra.

ELIZABETH KIRKLAND

wife of Everard Green (q. v.), was a Virginian by birth, and while the name, sometimes written Kirtland, would indicate Scotch origin, yet it is an old English name, the family hailing principally from Cumberland. The "General Armory" gives the family coat of arms as granted in the time of William I.

The origin of the family in this country seems to have been the arrival on the Hopewell, in 1635, of two brothers, Philip, born 1614, and Nathaniel, born 1616, who were sons of Philip Kirkland, probably of Sherington, Bucks County, England, whose wife's name is not known. Susanna, a sister of these brothers, married John Westall.

The son Nathaniel, with his brother Philip, went to Long Island, and settled in Southold, but returned to Lynn, of which he was selectman in 1678, and where he died in 1686. He married Parnell Kirkland, and their issue were three sons, Matthew, Philip, and John, born in Lynn August 1659, died January 20, 1716, and five daughters, Ann, Hannah, Elizabeth, born in Lynn, March 20, 1664, married William Pratt, Mary, and Martha, born May 15, 1667, married (first) Joseph Blaue, and (second) Captain William Southworth, of Compton, Long Island.

The son John, married Lydia, daughter of Lieutenant William Pratt, and lived in Saybrook; he was adopted by his aunt and uncle, Susanna (Kirkland) and John Westall, and succeeded to their estate. He became quite prominent in local affairs, having been appointed lieutenant of the fort at Saybrook in 1702 and again in 1708.¹

The issue of Lieutenant John and Lydia (Pratt) Kirkland were:

(1) John, born July 11, 1681, married Temperance, daughter of Rev. Thomas and Hester (Hosmer) Buckingham, of Saybrook, March 3, 1702-3.

(2) Priscilla, married Thomas Jones.

(3) Lydia, married (first) Griffin, and (second) Conklin.

(4) Elizabeth, married John Shipman.

(5) Nathaniel, married (first) Sara Chapman, and (second) Phoebe De Wolf.

(6) Philip.

(7) Samuel, married Martha Whittlesey.

(8) Daniel (Rev.), born June 17, 1701, Alma Mater

¹Colonial Records of Conn., vols. IV and V.

Yale, was first pastor of Newent Church, Norwich, Connecticut, 1720,¹ married July 15, 1723, Mary Perkins, by whom he had five sons and seven daughters, among them Rev. Samuel Kirkland, missionary to the Oneida Community, and father of President John Thornton Kirkland (Kirtland) of Harvard.

(9) Parnell, married John Tully.

Temperance, daughter of John and Temperance (Buckingham) Kirkland, married Lieutenant Andrew Southworth, and Hannah, daughter of Elizabeth (Kirkland) and John Shipman, married Samuel Southworth; and Eliza Lucy, daughter of one of these unions, married William Goodwin Lewis, who had by her a son, Henry Martyn Lewis.

Elizabeth (Kirkland) Green is doubtless a descendant, through some ancestor who removed to Virginia, of the Kirkland family above mentioned, but as a result of the devastation in the South of the Civil War, the connecting links have been lost.

This we know, however, that she was worthy of the best in ancestry; she was resolute of purpose, active in endeavor, and courageous in her convictions—no namby-pamby woman she, but a patriotic daughter and wife, ready ever to dare for the right; like Portia, “so fathered and so husbanded.”

James Hampton Kirkland, of Nashville, Tennessee, the very distinguished scholar, linguist and author, now Chancellor of Vanderbilt University, is probably of the same lineage as Elizabeth (Kirkland) Green, but unfortunately his family records have not been preserved, so that verification is impossible.²

Among other descendants of the illustrious family may be reckoned the family of the name in Houston, Texas, formerly of Mississippi, which is held in high estimation and includes Rosa Elizabeth (Kirkland) Noyes, widow of L. T. Noyes, a high Mason and successful business man; Louise (Kirkland) Haralson, widow of E. M. Haralson, who was a lawyer; Ida (Kirkland) Mullen, wife of Dr. Joseph Mullen, a leading specialist of the eye, nose and throat; Edwin Wells Kirkland, a successful business man, and the descendants of William Hinds (named for Major Hinds) Kirkland, deceased.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE GREEN TREE CONTINUED: THE FAMILY ACHIEVEMENTS AND DISTINCTION.

We observe, in closing our narrative of the Greens, with the cognate branch of Kirklands, that confusion has arisen in some of the histories as to the different Thomas's of the Green line, and as to the habitat of Colonel Thomas M. Green during certain periods;¹ but the confusion it is believed can be easily cleared away. Weaving the threads of history into the woof of family tradition, with harmonizing effect, we have no difficulty in concluding that Colonel Thomas M. Green, he of Revolutionary fame, lived in James City County, Virginia, where he was born and married, until in or about 1766, when he removed to North Carolina, and Georgia, remaining there until hostilities broke out between Great Britain and the Colonies; that he then went back to Virginia for service in the war, and there enlisted and served in the war as soldier, with the rank of colonel, and later returned, after the Revolutionary war was over, to the Georgia section, and thereafter for a time, before permanently becoming established, may have lived or had his headquarters in Natchez, Mississippi; that about 1783, he became involved in the altercation to be mentioned with the Spanish authorities, was arrested and taken to New Orleans, Louisiana, but was released, and that in or before 1785, he became finally settled on his vast estate, the homestead of which was known as "Gayosa," in what is now Jefferson County, Mississippi. These conclusions are supported by cogent circumstances. The result of a close investigation which we procured to be made in the Congressional Library, Washington, District of Columbia, is that the arrest and incarceration in New Orleans must have taken place between 1783 and 1785. The grant for the estate, including "Gayosa," is understood to have been in 1785, at any rate preceding a will made that year, now held as an heirloom, whereby he devised "Gayosa," to his youngest son Everard, and made therein no mention of his wife, Martha Wills, which indicates that she had already died, and that hence the perilous journey to New Orleans on the occasion of his arrest, which cost her life, had previously occurred. "Gayosa" was named for the Spanish Governor before whom he was taken when arrested.

¹The Cabells and Their Kin, p. 306.

Couple these circumstances with the certain evidence that he, Colonel Green, did remove from Virginia before the War of the Revolution, which as is known was being waged between 1776 and 1781, and that he was a soldier, holding the rank of Colonel, in that war, and the probable evidence, that his soldier service was under enlistment in Virginia, we are drawn almost irresistibly to the deductions announced.

Since writing the above, we have been favored with an apparently very ancient sketch of the Green genealogy, dated August 28, 1867, by W. Holmes, a descendant of J. Rensen Holmes, who married Augusta, daughter of Thomas M. Green, the Congressman (vide, supra). It tends to confirm the views we have expressed concerning the abodes of Colonel Thomas Green, the officer in the Continental Army, before and after the Revolution; for it is there stated that Colonel Green's children whose nativity was after 1765 and before 1774, namely, Henry Marston, Elias and Filmer Wills were born in North Carolina, and that the previous births of his children were in James City County, Virginia, and the subsequent ones, that is, of Abraham, September 28, 1774, and of Everard, April 15, 1776, were in Georgia (Sketch, p. 2).

In Force's "American Archives," 5th Series, page 595, proceedings of July, 1776, referring as we understand to Thomas Marston Green, husband of Martha Wills, it is said:

"Colonel Green, representing that only fifty (50) of his Flying Camp Company are now in this town, armed, accoutred and ready to march, and that a number of the drafts of some of the companies of his Battalion have not yet joined them, requests the sentiments of this Committee whether those who are (ready) shall march for the camp under his command, and what method shall be taken to oblige the other drafts to follow."

The social eminence and political prominence and influence of the Green family are well attested by the historical excerpts to follow.

In Lowry and McCardle's "History of Mississippi," Chapter VI, page 155, it is said:

"The Committee elected was Colonel Thomas M. Green,* Daniel Burnett, Justus King, Dr. John Shaw, Anthony

*He was a son of Col. Thomas Marston Green, senior, the Revolutionary ancestor.

Hoggett, James Stewart, Chester Ashley, and Abner Green,* and these were all representative men, gentlemen of character and education, who founded large families, made fortunes, and their descendants to-day may be found in large numbers in Mississippi and Louisiana."

In chapter VIII, page 186, it is stated:

"In December, 1802, the Legislature was again in session. It enacted a number of laws, established Jefferson College, and elected Colonel Thomas Marston Green a delegate in Congress in place of Honorable N. Hunter, who died at the Capital during the session."

Mrs. Clifton R. (Katherine Charlotte Green) Breckenridge, National Number 146, and Mrs. John Cox (Evie Green) Inge, National Number 66217, were accepted as members of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, by descent from their great great grandfather, Thomas Marston Green (husband of Martha Wills), as a soldier with the rank of colonel in the War of the Revolution; and in the former's application, in stating his Revolutionary services, the applicant quotes as follows from J. F. H. Claiborne's "Mississippi as a Province, Territory and State," Vol. 1, pp. 96, 228:

"Thomas Marston Green, an accomplished gentleman and most useful citizen, was the son of Colonel Thomas Green, the head of a numerous family and influential connection. He (Colonel Thomas Green) was a Virginian and an officer of the Continental Army. Removed to Georgia and was associated with General George Rodgers Clarke and General Elisha Clarke of Georgia, in their schemes of attacks on the Spaniards. Colonel Green, with a large party of friends, went to the Holston River, built boats and descended the Tennessee to its mouth, expecting there to find General George Rodgers Clarke, and his party, but not finding them and being unable to ascend the Ohio with their boats, they continued on to Natchez. Colonel Thomas Green (the father of the delegate) had an interview with the Spanish Governor, as agent for the State of Georgia, and claimed the entire district for that State. He was a bold, determined and persistent man. The Spanish authorities, finding that he was likely to excite a tumult, had him arrested and sent to New Orleans. His devoted wife soon followed and from exposure and anxiety died shortly after her arrival. This touched the heart of the

*He was also a son of Col. Thomas Marston Green, senior, the Revolutionary ancestor.

Spanish Governor and Colonel Green was released. The family settled on the waters of Cole's Creek, in Jefferson County.

"Colonel Cato West and General Thomas Hinds were his sons-in-law, and by intermarriages it constituted one of the largest connections in the district. Colonel Thomas Green was a man of indomitable resolution. He made the overland journey to Georgia, and was mainly instrumental in getting the Legislature to pass the act asserting the jurisdiction of Georgia over the Natchez district, and organizing it into a county named Bourbon, in 1785.

"His son, Thomas M. Green, was the second delegate to Congress. His son, Abner Green, married a daughter of Colonel Hutchins.

"Thomas Marston Green (the son just mentioned) was a warm friend of General Jackson's. It was to his house General Jackson sent his future wife (Mrs. Robards) while her divorce was being obtained, and she remained there fifteen months, and was married to Jackson in his house."

In support of the statement of Revolutionary service contained in her application, Mrs. Breckenridge gives the following references:

"'Mississippi as a Province, Territory and State,' by J. F. H. Claiborne, Vol. 1, pp. 96, 228; 'Poore's Political Register;' Sparks' 'Memories of Fifty Years,' pp. 150,5; Family Bible, Letters and Papers."

In William H. Sparks' "The Memories of Fifty Years," Chapter XI, pages 149, 151, referring to General Andrew Jackson and his marriage to Mrs. Rachel Robards, a young woman whose divorce was the result of her husband's jealousy of Jackson, incidentally pays a high tribute to the social standing and character of the Greens, as follows:

"It was during the period of his commercial enterprise in Mississippi that he formed the acquaintance of the Green family. This family was among the first Americans who settled in the State. Thomas M. Green and Abner Green were young men at the time, though both were men of family. * * *

"The friends formed in this section of country by Jackson were devoted to him through life, and when he sent (for it is not true that he brought) his future wife to Mississippi, it was to the house of Thomas M. Green, then residing near the mouth of Cole's Creek, and only a few miles from Bruinsburgh. * * *

"That there was any thing disreputable attached to the lady's name is most improbable. She was more than fifteen months an inmate of the house of Green, who was a man of wealth and remarkable for his pride and fastidiousness in selecting his acquaintances. He was the second Territorial Representative of Mississippi in Congress, was at the head of society socially, and certainly would never have permitted a lady of equivocal character to the privilege of a guest in his house, or to the association of his young daughters. During the time that she was awaiting a divorce (which she had applied for to the Spanish authorities), Mrs. Robards was at times an inmate of the house of Abner Green, of Second Creek, where she was always gladly received; and he and his family were more particular, if possible, as to the character and position of those they admitted to their intimacy than Thomas M. Green."

Lowry and McCardle (History of Mississippi, Chapter VI, p. 140), speaking of the marriage of Mrs. Rachel Robards and Andrew Jackson, and referring to the fact that Colonel Thomas Green, as a magistrate of Bourbon County, which then comprised the territory of Jefferson and other counties, united them in marriage, similarly pronounces high eulogy upon the Green family, saying:

"Mrs. Robards divided her time between the families of the brothers, Thomas M. and Abner Green, both of whom were leaders in public affairs and in social life. The first sat in the Congress of the United States as the second delegate from the Mississippi Territory. * * * Both were held in the highest esteem as men of courage and unsullied honor. Thomas M. Green resided near the bank of Cole's Creek, in what is now known as Jefferson County. The next year, 1791, Andrew Jackson returned to Natchez and during the summer of that year, he and Mrs. Rachel Robards were married at the residence of Thomas Marston Green in Jefferson County. * * *

"Colonel Thomas Green, the father of Thomas M. and Abner Green, had been for years the agent of the State of Georgia, and upon the establishment of the county of Bourbon in the Mississippi Territory, was appointed a magistrate of the county."

In "The Cabells and Their Kin," page 306, it is stated:

"Colonel Thomas Marston Green, a colonel in Continental Army. After Revolution removed* to Georgia. ***"

A family tradition has been, and it has found its way into a history,¹ that Martha (Wills) Green's mother was Ann Howard, descendant of the noted Howard family of England, of which Catherine, daughter of Lord Edmund Howard, and niece of Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey and third Duke of Norfolk, was fifth wife of Henry VIII of England; but unless the name was in America changed to Harwood, the claim is illusory, at least a mistake.

It is interesting to note, as suggesting the recognition by the people of the conspicuous services of the Greens in the public affairs of Mississippi, that when the commissioners mentioned as appointed by the Legislature, composed of Major Thomas Hinds, Lieutenant Governor James Patton and Dr. William Lattimore, had chosen the Capitol, naming it Jackson, they "selected a site for the State House, and called the square 'Capital Green;,' they set aside another for a court house, and this was called 'Court Green;,' a third square was reserved for a college, and called 'College Green.'"

The descendants of the Green line, if otherwise qualified, are eligible to the patriotic societies predicated upon official Colonial service, such as the Virginia Society of Colonial Dames of America, under ancestors, as follows:

I. MAJOR HENRY FILMER, a British officer, born in England, who resided in the Colony of Virginia from before 1653 to after 1673, dying subsequent to 1673. He and his wife Elizabeth, were the parents of Martha (Filmer) Green, wife of Thomas Green II (q. v.), and he was a member of the House of Burgesses from James City County, for 1642-1643.²

Under him, Katherine (Carson) Breckenridge (q. v.), a member of the Virginia Society of Colonial Dames of America, thus presents in her application her claim for membership:

"Henry Filmer, son of Sir Edward Filmer, of East Sutton, Kent, England, came to Virginia before 1642; was a Burgess for James City County 1642-1643, and soon after

*This should be, as the authors have shown, "returned" to Georgia, unless he lived in North Carolina before the Revolution and in Georgia after, he having previously "removed" to that section and gone back to Virginia, his old home, for enlistment in the War of the Revolution, in which he served as Colonel from at least July, 1776, to its close in 1781 (Vide, supra).

removed to Warwick County, where he was living as late as 1673. He married Elizabeth (surname not given) and had a daughter Martha, who married Thomas Green. They had a son Thomas Green (1665-1730), who married Elizabeth Marston (November 25, 1672—August 11, 1759), and had a son Thomas Marston Green who was born in James City County, married Martha, daughter of Filmer Wills, and later removed to Mississippi. Thomas M. and Martha Green had a son, Abner Green, who was born January 21, 1762, married November 1, 1784, Mary, daughter of Colonel Anthony Hutchins, and dying February 21, 1816, left a daughter Caroline C. Green, who married May 17, 1814, Colonel Joseph Carson (October 7, 1785—May 27, 1817) and had a son James Green Carson (March 8, 1815—August 11, 1863), who married on July 28, 1835, Catherine, daughter of William P. Waller, of Frankfort and Lexington, Kentucky. James and Catherine Carson had a daughter Katherine Breckenridge, who married Clifton Rhodes Breckenridge.

2. Major William Harwood, born and resided in Warwick County, Colony of Virginia, died June 2, 1737, was a member of the House of Burgesses from Warwick County, 1714, and probably longer, and for many years Justice of that County.¹ He married, but owing to the destruction of the Warwick County Records, it has been impossible to ascertain the name of the wife or date of marriage; but from the union there was born a daughter Ann, about 1714-1716, who became the wife of Filmer Wills, and to them was born a daughter Martha, in James City County, Virginia, March 31, 1734, who married Colonel Thomas Marston Green (q. v.).

He, Major William Harwood, was the son of Major Humphrey Harwood, who was a Burgess for Warwick County, Virginia, 1685, and in 1692-1693;² he patented, 1652, a tract of 2070 acres of land in Warwick County, granted in 1637, to his father, Captain Thomas Harwood.

He, Captain Thomas Harwood, came to Virginia in 1620, and on June 28 of that year was appointed a member of the Council (the higher legislative body), and was reappointed on July 24, 1621; but later, in 1629, 1630, 1633, and 1642, he was a Burgess for Mulberry Island, and in 1644, 1645, 1648, and 1649, he was a Burgess for Warwick County, being Speaker of the House in 1648-1649. In 1652, he was again appointed to the Council.¹

Colonel William Harwood, Burgess for Warwick County, 1742-1775, and a member of the Virginia Convention of 1776, was doubtless a son of Major William Harwood, who died June 2, 1737; hence a brother of Ann Harwood.²

It has long been asserted in the Green family that Ann Harwood mentioned was the daughter of Colonel William Harwood, the member of the Virginia Convention of 1776. To have been her father, he must have married her mother when he was just grown, and have been about 80 years old at the time he was a member of such Convention. Still these restrictions are not inconsistent with his being her father, but do tend strongly to make it probable that the text is correct in ascribing Ann Harwood's paternity to Major William Harwood instead of to his son, Colonel William Harwood. However, as she was undoubtedly the daughter of one or the other, and as each was in his time a member of the House of Burgesses, either thus making a descendant eligible to the Virginia Colonial Dames, discussion of the question would seem to be academic.

CHAPTER XXII.

PRESLEY KITTREDGE EWING, SON OF FAYETTE CLAY AND ELIZA JOSEPHINE (KITTREDGE) EWING; HIS CAREFR, MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN.

PRESLEY KITTREDGE EWING*

son of Dr. Fayette Clay Ewing, senior, and Eliza Josephine Kittredge (q. v.); born at "Ariel," Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, July 21, 1860; attended a preparatory school at Pass Christian, Mississippi, between 1870-1873; shortly after his father's death (1872), he temporarily discontinued school, owing to financial reverses in his family, and then, thirteen years old, personally solicited and obtained from a New Orleans merchant, to whom he introduced himself, advances on his own account for a country plantation store, from which he made the money to resume school; he later (1878) entered the University of Mississippi, at Oxford, whence he was graduated in 1881, before he was twenty-one years of age, in both the academic and law courses, which he had paralleled, taking in the former the degree Ph.B., and in the latter the degree LL.B. (first honor and valedictorian); he not only thus led his class, but developed high talents as an orator, having taken the Phi Sigma and Wiloughby Read medals for oratory, and having been chosen annual orator; his speech as a Junior, "The Wandering Jew," thrilled and captivated his audience, eliciting an ovation at the conclusion, and was published generally in the Mississippi, Memphis and New Orleans papers.

He settled in Houston, Texas, where he was admitted to the bar in the spring of 1882, and has since there resided and engaged in the practice of his profession, which has extended to the highest courts, Federal and State, including important cases, personally argued by him, in the United States Supreme Court.

His practice has been at all times general, varied as the body of the law, and confined to no particular branch, but perhaps the greatest display of his talents has been in the equity field of jurisprudence and in litigation over land and commercial interests; he is said by his profession to have pioneered or developed more or as many great juridical principles as any lawyer of the South.¹

He was for a number of years in his practice a partner of Geo. Goldthwaite and Henry F. Ring, and an associate of John Lovejoy, all distinguished lawyers, under successive firm names, Goldthwaite & Ewing, Goldthwaite, Ewing & Ring, and Ewing & Ring.

In 1899, he was elected and served as President of the Texas Bar Association; he is also a member of the Harris County Bar Association, and of the American Bar Association.

In April, 1905, he was commissioned and served as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas.²

He campaigned with brilliant success in the East for the Democratic National Committee under invitations, beginning in 1908; was one of the few Southern orators honored by such choice for the sections allotted to him. During his itinerary of 1908, he spoke at Syracuse, New York, with Vice-Presidential candidate John W. Kern (afterwards United States Senator from Indiana) to about ten thousand persons, completely winning his audience, including Senator Kern, who afterwards wrote of him:

"Judge Presley K. Ewing of Texas, is a profound jurist, a Prince amongst men, and one of the finest democrats between the oceans."

He is the author of treatises, legal and literary, which have evoked great praise, among them, The De-facto Wife, and The Rise and Progress of Education.

His renown as an orator is established and generally recognized, and as a specimen of his eloquence as also of his lofty professional ideals, reference is made to his speech, at a Bar banquet, as published in part.¹

He represented successfully before the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, at Wichita, Kansas, in May, 1899, the plan of United States Government appropriation for deep water gulf outlet from Houston.²

Upon the death of Mr. Justice Lurton (1914), and shortly after of Mr. Justice Lamar (1916), and the resignation of Mr. Justice Hughes (1916), of the United States Supreme Court, he was enthusiastically endorsed for Justice of that Court; perhaps no one was ever more strongly or widely endorsed for the position. Among those urging his appointment were Justices from four State Supreme Courts, including that of his own State, and the Senate of Texas unanimously, and it is affirmed by those in a position to know, that he would have received one of the two latter appointments, had the President given either to the South.

Not for the purpose of eulogy, but merely as reflecting the estimate in which Judge Ewing is held as man, lawyer and jurist by his compatriots, we quote from a few of the endorsements of him to the President for the Supreme Court:

Honorable Joe H. Eagle, Member of Congress from Texas:

"He would make one of the illustrious judges on that exalted bench, whose labors would make—not only for the establishing of justice—but also for the abiding glory of the Supreme Court as the final arbiter, under the Constitution, of questions affecting or determining the ultimate result of our system of free government.

"I hope this may in no sense be taken as fulsome; and I excuse my positive utterances concerning Judge Ewing on the ground that I personally by long contact know these statements are true; and I know of no other man of whom I would say these things."

Judge Norman G. Kittrell, jurist and journalist:

"Any man who attains, as Mr. Ewing has done, a place at the head of the bar of Texas, must necessarily be a lawyer of the highest order of ability; and that he stands abreast of the ablest lawyers at this or any other bar, cannot be truthfully denied."

Hon. Joseph C. Hutcheson, ex-member of Congress from Texas:

"In mental qualifications, temperament and physical appearance, nature has marked him for the position; a scholarly lawyer, a trained jurist, and a profound thinker."

Chief Justice T. J. Brown, of the Supreme Court of Texas:

"I believe Mr. Ewing qualified to fill the place well and ably, and I know that his character personally and professionally is such as to commend him to your kind consideration. His professional training has given him a broad comprehension of legal questions which enables him to reach sound conclusions."

Justice F. A. Monroe, of the Supreme Court of Louisiana:

"Would be an eminently proper person to be selected."

Justice W. R. Blakemore, of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma:

"Judge Ewing is a man of the highest legal attainments, a profound scholar, of judicial temperament, and a fine sense of honor. No man better equipped for the performance of the duties of this high office can be found."

Justice Garret J. Garretson, of the Supreme Court of New York:

"Judge Ewing is of irreproachable personal character and reputation, of superior intellectual and educational endowment, and as a lawyer ranks among the best and ablest in the country. His high standing as a man and a jurist is not confined to his State and the 'Southland,' but extends as well throughout the 'Northland' and the whole country."

The Houston Post:

"He is a man in the prime of life and activity, he is recognized wherever he is known as one of the South's most eminent jurists, and his high personal character would splendidly accord with the traditions of the august tribunal which his friends believe he would adorn."

The Houston Chronicle:

"Mr. Ewing has a wide acquaintance over the United States. In several campaigns he has carried the battle flag of democracy into doubtful states.

"His ability to meet the requirements of the position is universally conceded. Physically, morally, intellectually and in the element of professional attainments he measures up to the dignity and to the responsible duties of the position."

The Memphis News Scimitar:

"His profound scholarship and discursive reading have enriched his mind with a fund of encyclopedic information, both legal and historical, and he is looked upon by the legal profession of Texas as one of the master minds at the bar. Certainly if President Wilson should elevate him to the position, he will select the peer of any of the great lawyers whose names are being mentioned."

Judge Ewing was for many years President of the ZZ Club, the oldest social organization in Texas, and as such a social leader, with a personality and conversation easily adaptable and of peculiar attractiveness; he is a member of the important local clubs; he is a Master Mason, a Knight Templar, a Shriner and an Elk, and of the college fraternities, a Beta-Beta-Pi.

There has been reserved for the last what Mr. Ewing declares the best achievement of his life, his marriage on February 10, 1885, three years after he began practice, to Mary Ellen Williams, to whom he had been engaged for seven years—since their college days. From this marriage were born two daughters:

1. JOSIE VESTA, born February 11, 1886, and
2. GLADYS, born April 17, 1893 (q. v.).

The career of these daughters, as students and socially, has been very similar; both went to a private school until qualified for the sixth grade, then advanced to graduation in the Houston High School, each there receiving her diploma at 16 years of age, with a leading record. After obtaining the High School diplomas, both took a finishing course at the Finch School, in New York City, where each received with high honor a post graduate diploma, besides a special diploma in elocution; both have been social successes, popular and attractive, and much sought after and honored not only in Houston and sister cities of the South, but in leading cities of the East and West; both have always borne with them, as though an engravement on the family escutcheon, their lofty ideals of womanhood, but never obtrusively; and finally, both have a genius for poetry, Vesta winning when a High School student a prize offered for the best Christmas carol, and Gladys being accorded high honor at the Finch School for poems which have been by critics likened to Wordsworth. Commenting on one of her poems, "A Vision," inspired by seeing Maude Adams in Peter Pan, the famous editor and writer, Michael William Connolly,¹ thus said:

"That child ought to write more; she has a message for the world."

We insert, as an easy way of describing their poetic work, the following:

A CHRISTMAS CAROL

(Vesta Ewing)

"Brave shepherds were watching
In Bethlehem,
When angels brought tidings
Unto them.

"Behold a child is born,
This very night,
The Savior, Christ Our Lord,
The Light of Light.'

"The simple peasants bowed
In homage there
Before the Child who lay
In manger bare.

"And Mary pondered these things
In her mind,
And knew her Child was born
To bless mankind.

"And so in after years
We worship Him
Who gave His life to save
Our souls from sin.

"For though upon the cross
He nobly died,
Yet his great teachings were Not Crucified."

MARY ELLEN (WILLIAMS) EWING

A VISION.

(Gladys Ewing)

“The wonders of the world are manifold—
 That is God’s gracious gift to all mankind;
 Yet some there are who do not seek to find
 The treasures He bestowed. The quest of gold
 Has lured till warm and tender hearts grow cold,
 A sordid search of gain controls the mind,
 The sacred thoughts of life are cast behind,
 And love of self o’ershadows young and old.
 Oh, Peter Pan, come from thine elfin home
 And teach us to forget and laugh once more;
 With thee to ‘Never, Never Land,’ we’ll roam
 And faith renew in childish fairly lore.
 Let Youth and Joy and Love o’er all abide,
 A Fairyland is Life when thou art guide.”

Both of the daughters, Vesta (Ewing) Vinson, and Gladys (Ewing) Combes (q. v.) are members of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Numbers 123439 and 123437, respectively, each with eight bars; ancestors, Robert Ewing, Ephraim McLean, Surgeon Francis Kittredge, Corporal Ebenezer Eaton, Colonel Thomas Marston Green, Captain William Field, Major Abner Field and John Mills (q. v.).

They are also eligible to membership in the Virginia Society of Colonial Dames; ancestors, Robert Ewing I² (q. v.), and Henry Filmer and William Harwood.²

wife of Presley K. Ewing, was born August 7, 1862, in St. Mary’s Parish, Louisiana; married at “Sunnyside,” the parental home, in Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, on February 10, 1885.

Mrs. Ewing has, and deservedly so, a prominent place in “The Texas Women’s Hall of Fame,” published by the Biographical Press, Austin, Texas (page 220), for her life has been checkered with deeds of public and philanthropic service, acts of patriotic devotion, and sympathetic helpfulness to the weary of foot and saddened of heart.

¹The Virginia Society excludes justices of the peace of colonial times, but Robert Ewing was not a justice of the peace; he was a judge under commission of King George II (1754) with circuit court and chancery powers, of a court record, having unlimited and general jurisdiction in civil matters, extending to capital felony in criminal cases. *Edited by her husband.

She has been secretary of the Ladies Parish Association, Christ (Episcopal) Church, and of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and of the Ladies Reading Club, all of Houston, Texas; she has been First Vice-President of State Congress of Mothers, and of St. Humane Society; she has been President of the Ladies Reading Club, of Parent-Teacher Association, State President of Sunshine Society, and Chairman of Legislative Committee of Harris County Suffrage Association; she was at the time of her death First Vice-President of the Harris County Humane Society, Honorary President of Child's Welfare League, President of the Nobis Club (social), and comparatively recently, at San Antonio, refused the First Vice-Presidency of State Suffrage Association, for want of time to discharge the arduous duties of the position.

She was commissioned by Governor O. L. Colquitt on April 16, 1912, as a delegate to represent the State of Texas at the Southwestern Conference on Tuberculosis, at Waco, Texas, and similarly she was commissioned on April 8, 1913, as a member of the Board of State Bureau of Child and Animal Protection, and in like manner she was appointed a delegate to the State Conference of Charities and Corrections, held at Fort Worth, Texas, November 30 to December 2, 1913, inclusive.

The thought of doing something for the public weal was with her a dominant one, and in this line of pursuit, she was an inventor, as a sanitary measure, of an improvement in street cleaners, for the suction, ignition and immediate consumption of street sweepings, and was granted therefor Letters Patent of the United States.

Mrs. Ewing may be justly described as having been in her advocacy of measures, aggressive and determined in her positions, but at the same time she was of engaging and winning personality, optimistic, and as before suggested, genial and of sunny temperament, cheerful and fond of society, public spirited, ready in debate and resourceful in support of her contentions; a philanthropist and benefactress, full of sympathy for the weak or suffering, and often eloquent in her appeals for reforms in their interests.

As a club woman, she ever turned towards helpfulness of others less fortunate; as president of the Ladies Reading Club, she established a system of circulating libraries for the benefit of the country people; as president of the Parent-Teacher Association and United Mothers Club, she ably battled through the Press and by personal canvass for the adoption, and largely succeeded in the establishment, of twelve reforms in the public schools, called the "twelve necessities," looking to improved sanitation, safety and development of the children, and as an aid to that end, she advocated women on the school board, which resulted in an exciting municipal campaign over an amendment she had proposed to the city charter, in which she acquitted herself with great honor, the Press, even in Canada, portraying her as a woman who, though a social leader, had turned her talents to the service of humanity. She ardently took up the fight for shorter hours for the store clerks, known as the "six o'clock movement," and was instrumental in effecting that reform; in the course of her advocacy of it, she eloquently argued before the State Federation of Women's Clubs at San Antonio, and the National Federation of Women's Clubs at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, much of her speech in the latter instance being published as a special dispatch by great dailies.

Through all her enthusiastic pursuit of public affairs, she lost none of her domestic charm, but remained always the cynosure of attractiveness in the home, loving and beloved by her husband, daughters, and grandchildren, devoted to their interests and successes, and often helpfully promotive of them.

Mrs. Ewing was accepted as a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Number 130955, with three bars, ancestors, John Mills, Captain William Field and Major Abner Field.

CHAPTER XXIII.

WILLIAMS, FIELD AND MILLS TREES: LINEAGE THEREUNDER
. OF MARY ELLEN WILLIAMS, WIFE OF PRESLEY K. EWING.

Mrs. Ewing was the daughter of Charles Clark Williams, and of his wife, Eudora Elizabeth Cross, and the great granddaughter of William Field and his wife, Elizabeth Mills.

THE WILLIAMS TREE

Her father, Charles Clark Williams, who was born August 21, 1833, and died August 11, 1900, is understood to have been descended from Honorable William Williams, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, whose life of great sacrifice and achievement is familiar to all, and through him from the Pilgrim ancestor, Robert Williams, who came to America, with his wife, Elizabeth Stratton, in the Rose, 1625, and helped to found the town of Roxbury, Massachusetts, but, owing to the destruction by fire of the family records, the intermediate links cannot be given with completeness.

Much historic interest centers in the name Williams; in different forms it is found in German (Wilhelm, meaning "helmet of resolution"), and in Dutch, Danish, Bohemian, French, Italian and Greek. A tradition with many adherents traces the name to a tribe of North Wales in the ninth century. The great seal of William the Conqueror "Willhelmus" indicates that he was a Williams.

Oliver Cromwell was a member of the Williams family; Carlyle has it, "Cromwell alias Williams." His ancestor of the blood was Morgan Williams, a Welshman of considerable property, who married a sister of Lord Thomas Cromwell, afterwards Earl of Essex, whose descendants assumed the name of Cromwell. Morgan Williams' father was William Williams, who held a position of honor in the house of the Duke of Bedford. It is also asserted that Cromwell was a descendant of Richard Williams, who assumed the name of Cromwell from his maternal uncle Thomas Cromwell, Secretary of State to Henry VIII., with lineage extending to the barons of the eleventh century. Roger Williams, born in Wales, the founder of Rhode Island, was a contemporary of Cromwell, both born in 1599, and it is said they were personal friends.

CAPT. CHARLES CLARK WILLIAMS

The coat-of-arms of the Williams family of Wales, and of Norfolk, England, which was that of the Pilgrim, Robert Williams, here reproduced, is sable, a lion rampant, argent, armed and languid, gules; crest, a fighting cock, symbol of watchfulness; motto, Y Fyno Dwy Y Fydd—"What God willeth will be;" side motto, Cognosce occasionem—"watch your opportunity!"*

The author just cited in the footnote (Eleanor Lexington) to whom we are indebted chiefly for the above historic narrative, thus observes upon the patriotic ardor of the family:

"The Williams' have always been true to their flag in war. Call to arms aroused their fighting blood. They were in the ranks, they were fifers, drummers, drum-majors, ensigns, surgeons, quarter-masters, sergeants, captains, corporals, colonels, lieutenants, adjutants, majors, generals, brigadier-generals.

"Joseph Warren, who fell at Bunker Hill, was fifth in descent from Robert Williams, Pilgrim. General Otto Williams was a confidant of Washington's. William Williams, also a lineal descendant of Robert, was a member of Congress, 1776, and a signer from Connecticut."

Charles Clark Williams, the father of Mrs. Ewing, received his early education at Georgetown Military Academy, Kentucky; he was the son of Joseph Crawley (born 1773, died 1857), a scholarly man, a college professor of Greek and Latin, and of Harriett (Clark) Williams, who were born in Culpepper County, C. H., Virginia, and afterwards lived in Baltimore, Maryland, whence they removed to Lexington, Kentucky, and later, in 1828, to Lafourche, Louisiana. He accompanied his parents in these removals, and, having espoused the cause of secession, he joined the Confederate army in 1862, was a gallant soldier, serving as captain of company C in Colonel Vick's regiment of infantry, and participating in the engagements at Bisland, Brashear (now Morgan City) and Vermillion bayou. In 1855, he married Miss Amelia Camp, of New Orleans, Louisiana, who died the following year, leaving no issue; and, on February 13, 1861, he married Miss Eudora Elizabeth Cross, from which union was born the daughter, Mary Ellen, who was the eldest child, and in her are to be found many of her father's splendid qualities to a very marked degree; among them, a resolute purpose, dauntless and invincible, indefatigable energy in the prosecution of an endeavor, and withal a sunshiny temperament like a benediction. His capacity to overcome opposition as well as obstacles was strikingly shown by the readiness with which he repaired the ravages of the Civil War, which destroyed the considerable fortune he had accumulated; for thereafter, he rapidly became one of the wealthiest and most influential of the sugar planters of his section (Lafourche, Louisiana), and best of all, through the trying ordeal of the regaining struggle, he preserved untarnished his unswerving integrity and honor, bearing ever aloft the family escutcheon, and so guiding his course that he, respected by all and loved by those who knew him, might at each nightfall exclaim: "Tomorrow, do thy worst, I've lived to-day!"

THE FIELD TREE

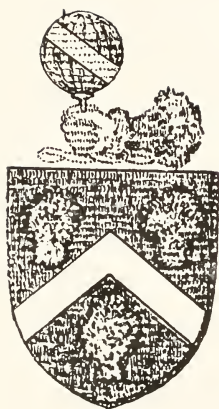

This is a family woven illustriously into the history of America, with talents in intellectual pursuits as diversified as the affairs of men. Notable among the distinguished of the name, being of the same family, are included David Dudley Field, D. D. (1781-1867), of Connecticut (who was graduated from Yale and became one of the most venerable of the ministers of New England), and his remarkably gifted sons, (1) David Dudley (1805-1904), graduated from Williams College, a very eminent lawyer; (2) Stephen Johnson, born 1816, famous Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; (3) Cyrus West (1819-1892), of great and successful business enterprise; (4) the Rev. Henry Martyn, born 1822, a prominent minister and distinguished author.¹

The task of tracing the lineage of the Fields has been in the main relieved of original research by us, as that work has been so admirably performed by others, from whom we quote freely.

In "Genealogy of the Fields of Providence, Rhode Island," as traced by Mrs. Harriet A. Brownwell, we read:

"It is said by the genealogist of the family of Zachariah Field, who first settled in Dorchester, Massachusetts, that 'the first individuals of the name of Field,—William and John—that settled in Providence, emigrated to this country in 1632, and no record of this family is to be found in ¹Int. Encyclopedia, Vol. 5, pp. 830-831.

Field

Rhode Island earlier than 1636. At that time we find the name of William Ffeld, Ffeild, or Ffield, and a year later that of John Ffeld, Ffeild, or Ffield, in the public records of Providence.'

"Both William and John Field were employed in the transaction of the business of the colonies, and both were appointed members of a Committee for arranging and establishing a 'General Court' at Newport, Rhode Island, in 1646.

"It is stated by Henry M. Field, the genealogist of the family of his father, David Dudley Field, D. D., of Stockbridge, Massachusetts, that a few years after the arrival of his ancestor, Zachariah Field, who settled in Dorchester, Massachusetts, two brothers, William and John Field, appeared at Providence, from whom are descended a large number of Fields in the State of Rhode Island.'" (Introduction, p. 3).

Again (p. 5), as follows:

"Most of the descendants of Thomas Field, the nephew and heir of the first William Field, settled in other States, where they and some of their descendants have left an honorable record. The sons of Captain (William) Field of Field's Point, were all of them noted men. A person who was familiar with the society of their day said of them, 'no young men in the State were more looked up to than Abner and Nehemiah Field.' They both held commissions in the Continental Army before they were 21 years old, and were present at the battle of Bunker Hill. They were leading men in public life and some of their descendants are among the most enterprising Western men. 'Hon. George Field, of Cranston,' the youngest son of Captain William, held a high social position and was noted for his moral and social qualities. He was always in public life. His stern sense of right and his unyielding integrity, his stately and dignified bearing, caused him occasionally to be alluded to as an 'Old Roman Senator.' One of our orators in describing the Rhode Island Assembly of other days alluded to 'George Field, the Cato of the Senate.'"

In "Record of the Family of the late Rev. David Dudley Field, D. D.," by his youngest son, Henry Martyn Field, it is said (p. 5):

"The name of Field is an ancient and honorable one in England. Some who have made a study of the subject profess to have traced it back to the time of William the Conquerer."

And again (same page):

"It (the Field Family) runs back directly to one who came to New England not more than 10 or 12 years after the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock, who was himself a Puritan and bore the old scriptural name of Zachariah. A few years later, two brothers, William and John Field, appear at Providence, from whom are descended the large number of Fields in the State of Rhode Island. In 1644 Robert Field came to the Massachusetts Colony, and the year after removed to Flushing, on Long Island, where with others he obtained land from the Dutch Governor at New Amsterdam, as New York was then called. He became the ancestor of the Fields of Long Island and New Jersey. * * * *

"This Zachariah Field was the son of John Field, a grandson of John Field, the astronomer."

And (p. 10):

"Timothy Field, a descendant of Zachariah, fought in the Revolution—joined Seventh Regiment in Kentucky, and was appointed sergeant major."

In the work of two volumes "Field Genealogy," by Frederick Clifton Pierce, which purports to give a record of all the Fields in America whose ancestors were in this Country prior to the year 1700, it is said (Vol. I, pp. 9-10):

"The name of Field is an ancient and honorable one in England, and can be traced far back of the Conquest. Probably not a dozen families in England can prove so high an antiquity. * * * Burke states in one edition of his 'Landed Gentry,' under the head of De La Field, that this family was originally in Alsace near the Vosges Mountains, where it was seated at the Chateau de la Field, near Colmar from the darkest period of the middle ages; and the Counts de la Field were the once powerful proprietors of the demesnes and castles near Colmar, of which the latter still bears their name. These lords had large possessions in Alsace and Lorraine, and are frequently mentioned in the wars of these countries. * * * The ancestor of the Field family, the first of whom there is any record, was Hubertus de la Field, who went to England with William the Conqueror in the year 1066 from near Colmar in Alsace, on the German border of France. He was of the family of the Counts de la Field, who trace back to the darkest period of the middle ages, about the sixth century. In Alsace the de la Fields entertained in the XI Century Pope Leo IX and his court on the way to consecrate Strasburgh. The edifice received many benefactions at their hands, and several of them are interred there in the Chanteries they founded."

And at p. 23:

"Hubertus de la Field received of William the Conqueror large grants of land for military services. In the XIV century, in consequence of wars between England and France, the English de la Fields dropped their French prefix de la, and ever after wrote their name Field. As previously stated, Sir Hubertus, the first in England, settled in Lancaster near the city of Chester."

Again (pp. 108-113), it is said:

"In the sixteenth century the name is illustrated by a distinguished astronomer, John Field, who was the first to introduce the Copernican system into England. Copernicus died in 1543, leaving as a legacy to the world, his great work, 'The Revolution of the Celestial Orbs,' in which he overthrew the system of Ptolemy, which had ruled the world for over 2,000 years."

The author just cited (Frederick Clifton Pierce), after reviewing the Rev. Henry Martyn Field's proofs that the family to which these pages relate is descended from the astronomer, John Field, thus comments (p. 113):

"These testimonies create a probability, amounting to a moral certainty * * * These combined proofs can hardly leave a doubt in the minds of the several branches of the Field family, in America, that they are descended from John Field, the astronomer."

THOMAS FIELD

"the nephew and heir of the first William Field," was born about 1648, in England, died August 10, 1717; he swore allegiance to King Charles II., June 1, 1667, and was chosen Treasurer of the town of Providence, Rhode Island, where he resided, on June 3, 1672¹ He married in Providence, Rhode Island, Martha Harris, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Austin) Field; she died about 1717.²

He was the son of Thomas Field, probably born in Thurnscoe, England, grandson of William Field, great grandson of John Field, and great great grandson of Richard Field, and great great great grandson of William Field, whose father was also named William, but the author just cited, while tracing these ancestors, does not review their families, simply saying in a note: "Names of early ancestors are dropped. See former generations."

Children born to Thomas and Mary (Harris) Field were:

- (1) THOMAS, born January 3, 1670; married (first) Abigail Hopkins, and (second) Abigail Chaffee.
- (2) Mary, born June 1, 1673; married John Dexter.
- (3) Amos, born 1677, died unmarried.
- (4) William, born June 8, 1682, married Mary Mathewson.
- (5) Martha, married Thomas Mathewson.
- (6) Elizabeth, married John Yeats, junior, January 24, 1709²

THOMAS FIELD

son of Thomas and Martha (Harris) Field (q. v.), born Providence, Rhode Island, January 3, 1670; died there on July 17, 1752; married (first) Abigail Hopkins, daughter of William and Abigail Hopkins, and (Second) Abigail Chaffee, April 28, 1737, she dying shortly after 1752. Children, being by his first wife, were:

- (1) Thomas, born 1696.
- (2) Stephen, wife's name Sarah; he died at sea September 10, 1727.
- (3) Jeremiah, born before 1706; married Abigail Waterman.
- (4) Nathaniel, married Margaret Barstow.
- (5) Anthony, married Mehitable Whipple.
- (6) Joseph, born before 1699; died at sea October 5, 1736, probably unmarried.³

JEREMIAH FIELD

son of Thomas and Abigail (Hopkins) Field (q. v.), was born in Providence, Rhode Island, before 1706, died September 2, 1768, where he then resided, either Cranston or Providence, Rhode Island; he was married December 27, 1725, to Abigail Waterman, daughter of Justice Richard Waterman. Children of the marriage were:

³Id., Vol. 1, pp. 175-177.

(1) WILLIAM, born April 30, 1728; married Waite Wescott.

(2) Abigail, born January 27, 1730; married October 7, 1743, Benjamin Gorham; he was the son of Jabez, son of Captain John Gorham, of Gorhamburg, England, and Desire Howland, who came to America in the Mayflower.

(3) Sarah, born March 16, 1735, died in Chester, Vermont; married George Rounds, January, 1758.

(4) James, born July 31, 1738; married (first) Hannah Stone, and (second) Jane Stone.

(5) Thomas, born September 7, 1741, married Deliverance Hammon.

(6) Daniel, born August 30, 1743; married Hannah Whitman.

(7) Jeremiah, born July 14, 1746; married Lydia Colwell.

(8) Hannah, born November 13, 1749; married Jeremiah Randall.¹

son of Jeremiah and Abigail (Waterman) Field (q. v.), was born, Providence, Rhode Island, April 30, 1728, died in 1816; he married January 4, 1750, Waite Wescott, daughter of Thomas Wescott; she was born in 1732, died September 23, 1808. Their children were:

(1) Remember, born September 7, 1751; died April 12, 1755.

(2) Pardon, born May, 1753; died April, 1755.

(3) ABNER, born July 5, 1754; married Rebecca Payne.

(4) Moses, born March 21, 1756; died December 6, 1763.

(5) Nehemiah, born May 15, 1757; married Sarah Whitman.

(6) Roxana, born February 20, 1759; died unmarried, March 26, 1778.

(7) Esther, born January 10, 1761; married July 13, 1783, Captain William Waterman, of Cranston, Rhode Island.

(8) David, born March 27, 1763; married Mary Greene.

(9) Huldah, born August 2, 1764; died April 11, 1824; married (first) Mr. Tabor, and (second) John Warner, February 22, 1798.

(10) Rhoda, born February 14, 1767; died unmarried, December 26, 1832.

(11) George, born December 25, 1768; died August 29, 1839; married Abigail Davis, daughter of Moses Davis; she was born 1775, died August 26, 1873.

(12) Eleanor, born December 13, 1772; died unmarried, March 8, 1864.¹

From the authority just cited, same reference, we quote, as follows:

"The presence of the French allies inspired the life of the town. * * * The officers were on terms of pleasant intimacy with the leading families, and their presence imparted an additional charm to social gayety. * * * The old Field homestead, at Field's Point, was much frequented by the French officers, where they were always sure of a hearty hospitality, and where they participated in social assemblies. * * *

"The patriotism of the Field Family was of the purest sort. In 1780, William Field was appointed captain of a company in the 2nd regiment, of Providence County Militia. * * *

"The Field family at the Point were numerous. The last survivor of the William Field family was Eleanor, a woman of uncommon natural endowments. She sold the Point estate to the City of Providence, and removed to Elmwood, and died March 8, 1864, aged 91 years."

Captain William Field, the subject of this division, served as captain in the War of the Revolution, for the cause of Independence, of Third Company Militia, Cranston, May, 1778, down to June, 1779, and was captain, appointed in February, 1780, of a company in the Second Regiment of Providence County Militia, which service is established by the following references:

ABNER FIELD

son of (Captain) William and Waite (Wescott) Field, (q. v.), was born July 5, 1754, Providence, Rhode Island, died in 1792; he married (first) Chloe Whipple, no children, and (second) Rebecca Payne, daughter of Captain John Payne, of Cranston, Rhode Island, February 22, 1779; she was born in 1760, died June 19, 1811. He was survived by four children, all born of the second marriage, namely:

(1) WILLIAM, born in 1780, died in 1845; married Elizabeth Mills.

(2) Robert Wescott, born February 28, 1781; married his cousin Lydia, daughter of Pardon and Elizabeth (Williams) Field.

(3) Abner Whipple, born in 1775; married Betsy Tarbell.

(4) Stephen, born January 10, 1791; married Mary Jordan.¹

The text just cited, same reference, has this to say:

"Major Abner Field * * * was the son of Captain William Field of Field's Point, Rhode Island. Abner was noted for his personal bravery. When he heard the news of the battle of Bunker Hill and the burning of Charleston, he instantly (1777) joined the volunteers, the Pawtuxet Rangers, at Cranston or Longneck, now called Pawtuxet Neck, under Lieutenant Colonel Oliver Arnold, second detachment. In July, 1778, he was on duty at Pawtuxet under Colonel Benjamin Arnold."

Again (pp. 364-365):

"Abner and Nehemiah Field were distinguished for personal bravery. When the news reached them of the battle of Bunker Hill, and the burning of Charleston, like Putman, they instantly left the field, and with rifle in hand joined the volunteers crowding on the scene of action. They were placed in the body of reserves. During the war Abner was taken prisoner and thrust into the notorious Jersey ship prison. Both Abner and Nehemiah held commissions."

The following references established the services of Abner Field, above mentioned, in the cause of Independence as a soldier of the Revolutionary war, also similarly of his brother Nehemiah:

Nehemiah Field, the brother above mentioned of Abner Field (q. v.), was a soldier in the War of the Revolution, ensign in Captain Jeremiah Olney's 4th. Company, Colonel David Hitchcock's Regiment of the Army of Observation, 1775. He (Nehemiah) was born May 15, 1757, Providence, Rhode Island, died May 15, 1815, married August 27, 1781, Sarah Whitman, born September 25, 1761, died July 21, 1831. Their children were: (1) Arthur F., born December 18, 1782, wife's name Chloe; (2) Aaron Leland, born October 14, 1787, married (first) Anna Ostrander, and (second) Diana Mowry; (3) William Whitman, and (4) Amy Waite; the last two having died apparently without issue, Amy Waite certainly so, she dying in infancy.¹

WILLIAM FIELD

son of Major Abner and Rebecca (Payne) Field (q. v.), was born in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1780, probably in January, died in Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, in 1845; married Elizabeth Mills, daughter of the Revolutionary soldier, John Mills, in 1841; she was born in 1795, died in 1845.

William Field left Rhode Island when young and unmarried, and went West, finally settling on the Lafourche in Louisiana, and seems in consequence of drifting away from early associations to have been lost sight of for a time in the East and assumed to have died young, unmarried.

In point of fact, after settling in Louisiana, he was prosperous and accumulated considerable wealth. Field Lake, near Lockport, Louisiana, was named for him. He was an architect, but engaged in various business enterprises, became prominent in the section of his domicile and when he died on the Lafourche, in 1845, he was much eulogized by the Press and lamented by a large circle of relatives and friends.

As stated, he married Elizabeth Mills, in 1814, and by her he had eleven children:

- (9) Fielding, died young.
- (10) Adalia, died young.
- (11) Maria, born September 21, 1835, died January 15, 1911, married William Darden.

MARY PIERCE FIELD

daughter of William and Elizabeth (Mills) Field (q. v.) was born in Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, in 1819, died March 13, 1893, and was buried in St. John's (Episcopal) Cemetery, at Thibodaux, the seat of the parish just mentioned; she was married March 3, 1844, to Benjamin Franklin Cross, who was a sugar planter of the Lafourche, born in 1823, died in 1868. They had one child, Eudora Elizabeth, born February 12, 1845.

Mrs. Mary Pierce (Field) Cross, after the death of her husband, lived at "Sunnyside," the home of her son-in-law, Charles Clark Williams, and by her tender care and gentle ministrations she became so endeared to her daughter's children, that they regarded her not as grandmother only, but as their dualistic mother, and as such her memory remained hallowed in their hearts.

EUDORA ELIZABETH CROSS

daughter of Benjamin Franklin and Mary Pierce (Field) Cross, was born in Lafourche Parish, February 12, 1844, died in New Orleans, Louisiana, October 21, 1918, married February 12, 1861, Charles Clark Williams, before mentioned, who was born August 21, 1833, died August 11, 1900. They had eleven children:

1. MARY ELLEN (q. v.), born in St. Mary's Parish, in or near New Iberia, Louisiana, on August 7, 1862, wife of Presley K. Ewing, and mother of Josie Vesta (Vinson) and Gladys Ewing (Combes); she died April 1, 1919.

2. Charles Albert, born and died in 1864.

3. Joseph Crawley, born February 12, 1866.

4. Dora Louise, born December 8, 1867, married at "Sunnyside," April 4, 1888, Henry Garland Bush, of New Orleans, Louisiana, born October 10, 1866; he died February 20, 1911. Children:

(1) John Garland, born February 28, 1891, in New Orleans. He was a first lieutenant in the World War.

(2) Phillis Gresham, born October 25, 1892, in New Orleans; married December 14, 1916, William Victor Wrightson, of New Orleans, born November 12, 1886.

(3) Harry, born September 3, 1893. He was also a lieutenant in the World War, and fought overseas.

(4) Ruby Bethea, born December 26, 1901.

(5) Gretchen, born September 5, 1905.

All born in or near New Orleans, Louisiana, except Gretchen, born in Atlanta, Georgia.

5. William Franklin, born December 26, 1869, married in New Orleans, March 4, 1916, Marie (LeFoul) Loubat, a widow.

6. Charles Clark Williams, junior, born November 17, 1871, died at "Sunnyside," August 10, 1887.

7. Minnie Roberta, unmarried, born March 17, 1874.

8. Daisy Belle, born November 27, 1875; married April 24, 1895, Beverly Smith, M. D., of Franklin, Louisiana, born April 17, 1870. Children:

(1) Beverly Chew, B. A., University of Virginia, and later from same University, degree M. D., born at Franklin, Louisiana, February 7, 1896.

(2) Daisy Belle, born same town, April 6, 1899, a student at Sophie Newcomb, New Orleans, Louisiana.

9. Ruby Bethea, born July 28, 1877; died November 14, 1918.

10. Morgan Whitney, born June 29, 1879; died in New Orleans, Louisiana, May 19, 1914; married January 11, 1911, near Zachary, Louisiana, at the bride's home, Judith Coleman Mills, his cousin, born about 1880. Children:

(1) Morgan Whitney, born January 12, 1912; died June 5, 1917, in New Orleans, Louisiana.

(2) Judith Coleman, born May 29, 1914—both born near Zachary, Louisiana.

11. Warren Dudley, born February 12, 1881, married in Donaldsonville, Louisiana, on June 24, 1915, Elizabeth St. Vrain Moebius, born November 14, 1892, Point Coupee Parish, Louisiana, daughter of John and Ida Clara (Brown) Moebius.

All the children of C. C. and Eudora E. Williams were born at "Sunnyside," Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, except Mary Ellen, whose place of birth has been given.

The "Little Mother," as she was called in the family, Eudora (Cross) Williams, removed from the old homestead, "Sunnyside," before her death, taking up her abode in New Orleans, Louisiana. Possessed of a charming personality, with a certain poetic grace and alertness of interest, she was in society a general favorite. Even to the last, traces of her early great beauty were visible; indeed in every line of her face, it would not have been difficult to discern, as some writer has expressed it, "a dimple of her youth." Always devoted in her sacrifices as a wife and of motherhood, and kindly considerate of others, her life was luminous with virtues which have adorned exalted womanhood in all the ages of enlightenment.

Minnie Roberta and Ruby Bethea Williams (q. v.) became members of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Numbers 125106 and 128979, under Captain William Field and Major Abner Field, also under John Mills, each entitled to three ancestral bars.

The other descendants of William and Elizabeth (Mills) Field, if otherwise qualified, are similarly eligible to the patriotic societies.

THE MILLS TREE

the great great grandfather of Mary Ellen (Williams) Ewing, was the son of Amos and Mary (Wright) Mills; he was born in Virginia, 1758, and removed thence with his parents to Pennsylvania, where he engaged with them in farming; he was a gallant soldier, under enlistment in Pennsylvania, for Independence in the War of the Revolution; he stood (for he was one of them) "where stood the embattled farmers and fired the shot was heard around the world."

Mrs. Ewing (Mary Ellen) has been accepted as a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, tracing to him as her ancestor, National No. 130955. In her application his soldier-service is referred to as having been as "a Private in Captain Joseph Gardner's Company, Second Battalion, East Notingham, Chester County Militia, commanded by Colonel Evan Evans, 1778," and reference is made therefor to "Page 521, Volume Five, Pennsylvania Archives, Fifth Series."

Under the evidence, with apparent proper elimination, this is correct; but whatever the company or companies or period or periods of his service, the essential fact is beyond question, that he was a soldier for Independence in the War of the Revolution.

In addition to family tradition and ancient letters, bearing convincing evidence of his Revolutionary service in Pennsylvania, there is still in the family of his grandson, Thomas L. Mills, M. D., of Zachary, Louisiana, the sword which has been handed down as worn by him, John Mills, in the War of the Revolution, and upon which there is the inscription: "Draw me not without reason, put me up not without honor."

He (John Mills) removed about the beginning of the year 1781 to Point Coupee Parish, Louisiana, where on April 16, of that year, he was married to Perine Marioneau, who was born in 1762, and died in 1829; he died in 1825.¹ Their children were:

1. Mary, born 1782, married Mr. Pierce.
2. Plaegah, born 1790, died unmarried.
3. Perine, born 1793, married Hudson Tabor.
4. ELIZABETH, born 1795, married William Field.
5. John, born 1797, married Eunice Lilly.

ELIZABETH MILLS

daughter of John and Perine (Marioneau) Mills, and great grandmother of Mary Ellen (Williams) Ewing (q. v.) was born in 1795, and died in 1845; she married William Field (q. v.) in 1814.

From this point the Mills line is the same as the Field line (supra), to which we refer.

CHAPTER XXIV.

JOSIE VESTA (EWING) VINSON, DAUGHTER OF PRESLEY
KITTREDGE AND MARY ELLEN (WILLIAMS) EWING:
HER LIFE, MARRIAGE AND CHILDREN.

JOSIE VESTA EWING

daughter of Presley Kittredge Ewing and Mary Ellen Williams (q. v.), was born at "Sunnyside," Lafourche Parish, Louisiana, on February 11, 1886; educated as already stated and passed her young ladyhood at the parental home in Houston, Texas.

She was married at Christ Church (Episcopal), Houston, Texas, on April 22, 1908, to Joseph Carroll Vinson, born April 28, 1878, son of Baldrige Tyler and Alice (Baldrige) Vinson, of an old and honored Southern family. At the wedding, which may be numbered among the most brilliant in the South, the Rt. Rev. George H. Kinsolving, Bishop of Texas, and the local rector, the Rev. Peter Gray Sears, and the bride's uncle, the Rev. Quincy Ewing, of Louisiana, officiated.

After her marriage, she and her husband lived in San Francisco, California, then in Tucson, Arizona, and again in San Francisco. Born of the union were two sons, (1) Kittredge (baptized Joseph Kittredge), born at Tucson, Arizona, April 27, 1910, and (2) Presley Ewing (first called but not baptized John Dana), born at San Francisco, California, November 22, 1911, both vigorous and promising lads, and the pride, joy and hope of the entire family.

Since October 28, 1914, Vesta has been single, living at the home of her parents, Houston, Texas, with her little boys, in the midst of a circle of admiring and warm friends; she is Secretary of the Lady Washington Chapter of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, also a member of the Chatauqua, and her papers before the Houston Circle have attracted attention and elicited much praise for their high excellence; she is a voracious and retentive reader, and is often appealed to in the family as "The encyclopedia."

Joseph Carroll Vinson is as before stated the son of Baldrige Tyler Vinson, born December 6, 1842, near Franklin, Louisiana, died November 26, 1918, and his wife, Alice Baldrige, born April 23, 1848, at Franklin, Louisiana, died September 15, 1919; they were cousins, married July 19, 1876. Alice Baldrige was the daughter of Joseph Hodges Baldrige, born August 20, 1824, died December 22, 1860, and his wife, Sue Ann Vaughan, born 1828, died April 15, 1850 at Franklin, Louisiana; they were married May 12, 1847. Joseph Hodge Baldrige was the son of J. W. Baldrige, born May 16, 1798, died September 3, 1876, and Sallie Wells Hodge, born May 20, 1807, died October 17, 1887; they were married in Sumner County, Tennessee, February 27, 1823. Sallie Wells Hodge was the daughter of Joseph Hodge, born in England, 1755, died February 28, 1822, in Sumner County, Tennessee, and his wife, Euphemia Agnew, born about 1765, died about 1815; they were married in Guilford County, North Carolina, February 20, 1782. Joseph Hodge was an emigrant from England, a settler in North Carolina, and was a soldier, ranking major, in the Revolutionary War, on the side of Independence; and, while under the command of General Nathaniel Greene, he was severely wounded in the battle of Guilford Court House, on March 15, 1781.¹ For his gallant services in the cause of Independence, he received a grant of valuable land in Sumner County, Tennessee, where he later lived and died. He was the son of John Hodge and his wife, Agnes Shaw, of England.

GLADYS (EWING) COMBES

CHAPTER XXV.

GLADYS (EWING) COMBES, DAUGHTER OF PRESLEY KITTREDGE
AND MARY ELLEN (WILLIAMS) EWING: HER LIFE AND MARRIAGE.

GLADYS EWING

daughter of Presley K. Ewing and Mary Ellen Williams (q. v.), was born in Houston, Texas, April 17, 1893; like her elder sister, she was educated in the Houston High School, and the Finch School (post graduate) of New York, and passed her young ladyhood at the parental home in Houston. She had a leading part in the Carnival at Houston the year she made her debut, and was Maid of Honor the following winter to the Queen of the Rex Carnical, New Orleans, Louisiana. She was also a brilliant figure in Washington, District of Columbia, society during the winter of 1915-1916. Though thus prominent in social life, she was never exclusively devoted to its behests, but was much identified with church and charity work, and at all times both earnest in endeavor and faithful in service.

She married at the family home in Houston, Texas, April 25, 1917, Abbott Carson Combes, junior, B. S. and M. D., of Elmhurst, Long Island, New York. The wedding was a very brilliant function, and the clergyman officiating was her godfather uncle, the Rev. Quincy Ewing, of Louisiana.

Since their marriage, she and her husband have lived in Elmhurst, New York, where he is engaged in the practice of his profession.

Dr. Combes was a volunteer for service in the war with Germany, and was commissioned first lieutenant of the Medical Corps, serving until his honorable discharge on cessation of hostilities.

Born of this marriage, a son, named for his father, on May 21, 1918, who passed away when about a month old, June 16, 1918, but he lived not in vain, for he left at least to his bereft parents the sacred memory of newly awakened love, and the rekindled hope of blessed immortality.

ABBOT CARSON COMBES, JUNIOR

husband of Gladys Ewing, was born July 4, 1884, son of Abbott Carson Combes, M. D., and his wife, Marie Louise de Raimes; he was graduated from Columbia College, New York, degree B. S., and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Medical Department, of Columbia College, M. D., and promptly entered the practice of his profession. He is a Mason, Royal Arch, a member of a Colonial War Society and of the medical fraternity, Chi-Zeta-Chi.

The family from which Dr. Combes descends is a distinguished one, and in it men of importance may be particularly noted; for example, in the line of ancestry, we instance Thomas Jones, a lieutenant, John Seaman a captain, and Daniel Whitehead, a major; Robert Waterhouse, Chaplain to the King; William Pope, Knight of the Bath, Baron and Earl; Sir Richard Combes, knighted February 5, 1660; Pierre Charles de Raismes, Counsel to the King and Treasurer of France; and Degory Priest, who came to America in the Mayflower.

The emigrant ancestor of the Combes family was Richard, of Hemel Hempstead, England, and the family were settled at Hempstead, Long Island, as early as 1669. The line of descent is, Richard,¹ John,² Daniel,³ Nathaniel,⁴ Nathaniel,⁵ Benjamin,⁶ Clinton,⁷ Abbott,⁸ Abbott.⁹

Nathaniel⁴ was a recognized patriot of the Revolution, who with unflinching loyalty rendered material aid to the cause of Independence.

Benjamin of the line is understood to have fought in the War of 1812.

Dr. Abbott C. Combes, senior, formerly Adjunct Professor of the Post-Graduate Medical College, New York City, a member of the Founders and Patriots Society, and for twenty-two years of the New York National Guards, and Captain therein, is a prominent physician and citizen of Elmhurst, Long Island, born July 21, 1858, at East Rockaway, New York, married January 18, 1882, Marie Louise de Raismes. Issue: Martha married James Robinson; Abbott Carson, (q. v.); Clinton, a lawyer of New York City, in the firm of which Elihu Root is head; J. de Raismes, Captain Medical Corps, United States Army in France; Marie Louise; Rodney, in the Navy, and Richard, in the Army, of the United States, in the War with Germany.

Marie Louise de Raismes, wife of Dr. Abbott Combes, senior, born November 2, 1857, died October 30, 1912, was of noted French lineage, traceable as far back as the 12th Century; daughter of Jean Francois Joseph de Raismes, born in Paris, France, 1803, and Martha Ella Holt, his wife. The family name is associated with the town of

California

DR. ABBOTT C. COMBES, J R.

Raismes, in French Flanders. A first cousin of Marie Louise de Raismes was Maria de Raismes, an author and orator, and a leading spirit in the Women's cause in France; except Joan d'Arc, she is the only woman whose statue has been erected in a public square in Paris.

Martha E. Holt, the mother of Marie Louise de Raismes, was a descendant of Nicholas Holt who came to America in 1636, and a granddaughter of William Chaffee, who fought in the Revolution, taking part in the important battle of Stony Point.

Another ancestor, Samuel Manning, was an ensign in the Billerica, Massachusetts, Militia, and under him the family is eligible to membership in the societies based on service in the Colonial Wars.

CHAPTER XXVI.

CONCLUSION

There are probably a few in every family who are ready to debase brains as a means of exalting brawn—to these, groping in the lower levels, there will be no vision for this book.

There are others, however, who see in the world's advancement and greatness the accomplishments of both body and mind working together, but with the latter the soaring quality,—to those, and there are many, we are persuaded these pages will be read not without pleasure, aye, even largely as an incentive, and in some respects as an inspiration.

The benefits likely to follow from a record of family achievements, if worthy, are believed to be sufficient to justify the labor and cost of preparation.

We are inclined to largely agree with Edmund Burke, that—

“Example is the school of mankind, and they will learn at no other.”¹

We do entirely agree with Edward Everett, where he said in his famous speech of July 5, 1858:²

“The character, the counsels, and example of a great man * * * may guide us through the doubts and difficulties that beset us; they may guide our children and our children's children in the paths of prosperity and peace, while America shall hold her place in the family of nations.”

To the scoffer at family history, we commend a perusal of thoughts to follow, from great men.

John Quincy Adams, in his speech at Plymouth, December 22, 1802, said:

“Think of your forefathers! Think of your posterity!”

If we may be pardoned another quotation from Edmund Burke, it was he who observed:³

“People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to their ancestors.”

No undue claim has here been made for ancestry, as the preface indicates; indeed, the authors cheerfully concede,

THE GRANDSONS
KITTREDGE AND PRESLEY EWING

as they themselves think, that family alone never made a man truly great, and that "thought and deed, not pedigree, are the passports to enduring fate." They also recognize, with Seneca,¹ that "he who boasts of his descent, praises the deeds of another."

But, at the same time, these observations are only part of the truth, and standing alone are "lights that do mislead." What Sallust² says, is equally true:

"The glory of ancestors sheds a light around posterity; it allows neither their good or bad qualities to remain in obscurity."

A striking thought on the subject is that of Goethe in Faust:³

"What dazzles, for the moment spends its spirit;
What's genuine, shall posterity inherit."

While we have already sufficiently expressed our own view, we may in emphasis of it adopt the following from Whately's Annot. on Bacon's Essay of Nobility:

"Bishop Warburton is reported to have said that high birth was a thing which he never knew any one disparage except those who had it not, and he never knew anyone make a boast of it who had anything else to be proud of."

* * * * *

Dear reader, the point of parting has been reached. We have wandered together in groves of sacred memories, to be treasured; we have stood with honored ancestors on cliffs of immortal fame, but at every pause we have been reminded, have we not, of the common end of all. For us, the sun will soon be setting, with darkness closing in our departure, but let us hope it may rise, and continue to rise, with the effulgence of a radiant morning, upon generations yet unborn, wearing worthily the name we bear.
